Police were called on to "dispose of him," but admitted "sentiment ran away with judgment" so they are seeking a home for him. Business Good As City Gets 89 New Firms Employment at High Level, Reflecting Better Times.

By SAMUEL E. CLARKE.

Constitution Financial Editor.
Bright spots dot Atlanta's business horizon despite higher taxes, priorities, etc.

During the first nine months of this year, 89 new factories, distributing, sales and service organizations were established in Atlanta by out-of-town firms, and 63 resident representatives located here to serve the Southeastern territory, Frank Shaw, of the Industrial Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, announced yesterday.

The total number employed by these 152 firms is 3,880, with an annual payroll of $5,820,000.

A further checkup of 300 of Atlanta's 900 manufacturing plants shows that employment is now at a level 20.2 per cent higher than a year ago.

The Federal Reserve Bank reported Atlanta bank clearings totaled $373,900,000 for September, against $365,300,000 in August.

Clearings for the first nine months of 1941 were given as $3,192,000,000, compared with $2,415,800,000 for the same period in 1940, an increase of 32 per cent.

Retail trade also is taking an active part in Atlanta's forward march. The Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta reports department store sales for the past eight

Campus Heads Explain Aim of Their Protests

Adequate Steps To Prevent Georgia's Discrediting Sought.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 16.—Campus leaders of the University of Georgia tonight made public a statement listed as "an open letter to the Governor of Georgia and the people of the state" in connection with the four-mile-long motorcade which yesterday journeyed to the state capitol at Atlanta to protest "political interference" with university affairs.

The letter was signed by Bob Norman, president of the Sphinx honor society; Dick Kenyon, Al Williams and Robert Pottle.

Text of the letter follows: "We, the students of the University of Georgia, desire to inform you by a statement of the aims and the purpose of our recent motorcade and other demonstrations.

"We do not desire to make an issue of the racial question; ours is not a political fight; ours is not a fight against the Governor of Georgia, nor is it a fight in behalf of any of his enemies; we are entirely divorced from political influence.

"Our one supreme desire is to prevent the 16 colleges of our University System of Georgia from being dropped from the accredited list of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools by restoring the Board of Regents to its former state of political freedom.

"We believe that if this is done, the association at its meeting in December cannot refuse to allow our schools to remain on the ac-

Police yesterday were instructed by Chief Hornsby to begin enforcing the new antinoise ordinance which prohibits the blowing of a horn while the car is standing still, except to avoid an accident, and while in motion the motorists cannot blow their horns until they have slowed down the motor.

Officials of the police lieutenant's office were instructed to accept collateral of $7 from any motorists against whom cases are made for excessive horn blowing.

F. D. R. Confers Navy Transfers With War Heads 2 Submarines In Jap Crisis To the British Cancels Cabinet Meeting for Emergency Parley; Showdown Seen.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—President Roosevelt summoned his top-flight military leaders and held an unscheduled conference today for an hour and three-quarters, while on Capitol Hill some legislators predicted that rushing events in Russia and the Far East might lead to a showdown between the United States and Japan.

Without explanation, the President canceled a cabinet meeting and called into his office the following:

The secretaries of state, war and navy; General George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations; and Harry L. Hopkins, lend-lease supervisor.

There was little doubt that the situation in Russia, where Moscow is half-fringed by hammering Nazis, and in Japan, where the cabinet of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye has resigned, was uppermost in the minds of the conferees.

Conferees Are Silent. Secretary of State Hull remained behind for 15 minutes and on leaving the White House said that he was "expressly prohibited" from saying anything.

He added quickly that he doubted whether any official statement would be made by the White House.

Asked whether further meetings of the group were planned, he replied: "There should be, right along."

In congress, two men who usually are poles apart in their outlook on foreign affairs agreed that the Japanese cabinet resignation bore ominous implications for the future of Japanese-American relations.

Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota, said:

"Of course, we can't tell much until a new cabinet is appointed, but the resignation of the former one apparently means a complete military set-up in Japan. If it is to be an all-out pro-Axis government, then we will face a most serious hour."

Hinges on Russia. Senator Hill, Democrat, Alabama, asserted:

"It looks to me as though Japan believes Russia might cave in and that they want to move in somewhere if she does. Then we may have to move."

To many persons here, the most likely Japanese move appeared to be an attack on Siberia. All executive officials in Washington were keeping their own counsel on what this country would do in event of such an attack on a nation to which the administration has pledged all possible material aid in the struggle against Hitler.

One legislator who refused to see any possibility of a clash between the United States and Japan was Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, who told reporters: "I cannot believe that the military group in Japan would be crazy enough to try to make war on us."

Recommissioned Vessels Shifted Under Terms of Lend-Lease.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Two old Navy submarines considered useful chiefly for coastal patrol and short-range operations will be transferred to Britain soon, raising the total of warships thus far released to the British to 78.

Secretary Knox announced today that the undersized craft would be turned over to Britain under provisions of the lend-lease law and would be manned by British officers and crews before leaving American waters. The date on which the British will take over was not disclosed.

Other Transfers.

The first war vessels transferred by this country to strengthen the British fleet were 50 old destroyers, traded for a chain of naval and air base sites in Atlantic and Caribbean waters in September, 1940. Last April, Secretary Knox announced that 16 high-speed torpedo boats were being transferred under the lend-lease program. Ten Coast Guard cutters also were released last spring.

Whether release of the two submarines is a closed deal in itself or indicates a possibility that more may be transferred as new subs join the American fleet was a question on which Naval authorities declined comment.

Knox's announcement said that as of October 1 this country had 113 subs in active service and 73 under construction. Of those in service, 67 were described as "over age and recommissioned."

"Overage" means that the submarines are more than 13 years old—the arbitrary age limit fixed by various international treaties and recognized in American law. "Recommissioned" means that the vessels once were taken out of service and at some later date reinstated.

Craft Described.

Of the two subs turned over to Britain, one was of the 800-ton "S" class, first commissioned in 1923, decommissioned in 1930 and put back into service in 1940. Boats of this type are armed with four or five torpedo tubes and carry 12 to 14 torpedoes. They also have a four-inch deck gun. They were originally designed for fleet service, but were found unsuitable for such operations, probably because of their comparatively short range of around 3,000 miles.

The other sub is of the 530-ton "R" type, commissioned in 1919, decommissioned in 1930, and commissioned a second time in 1940. Of shorter range than the 800-tonners, the "R" boats are armed with one three-inch gun, a 50-caliber machinegun, four torpedo tubes and eight torpedoes.

The newer submarines of the American Navy average around 1,500 tons and have much greater cruising range.

FABRICATOR—Frances Van Hall, of Amsterdam, Holland, is the world's foremost designer of handwoven fabrics. She is visiting Atlanta after a three-month stay at Georgia's famous Berry Schools at Rome.

Dutch Girl, Weaving Expert, Fascinated by Berry Schools

Frances Van Hall, Native of Amsterdam, Has Traveled 50,000 Miles and Visited 145 Cities Since War Broke Out.

By EUGENIA BRIDGES HARTY.

Willowy, blonde and vivacious, Frances Van Hall, of Amsterdam, Holland, has found her way to Atlanta after traveling 50,000 miles and visiting 145 cities since the day the war broke out. She has earned her passage by instructing rural America in the art of handweaving.

The expert in a highly specialized field, that of designer of patterns and textures of handwoven fabrics, Miss Van Hall is now employed by the United States Department of Agriculture to revive an almost lost art in this country. Working directly under the Farm Security Administration, the young Dutch girl has left a path strewn with exquisitely fashioned textiles, all hand-woven, from Florida to New York and from California to Georgia.

Lauds Berry Schools. Her latest assignment, and her current enthusiasm, is the Berry schools at Rome, Ga. For the past three months Miss Van Hall has instructed the faculty and 10 selected students in her methods.

"They have the best weaving department I have seen in this country," she said. "I only taught them some new patterns, textures and designs—they are already expert weavers."

"The school is so out of it all, that I was able to give them some fresh ideas. They are so cloistered there. And I get around a bit," she added.

Speaks Six Languages. Miss Van Hall speaks six languages fluently, and reads, writes and understands four more. She has lived for the past few years in Copenhagen, where her own firm has won international recognition. In 1937, the Grand Prix de Paris was awarded her handwork. In 1939, she won first prize at the Metropolitan Museum's Exhibition of hand-woven fabrics, when Denmark took the honors. Her designs were exhibited at the New York World's Fair.

This artist, having designed the materials that went into costumes for Crown Princess Ingrid, of Denmark, is now in Atlanta.

Kazan Is Seen As New Center Of Government

Nazis Claim Capture of Odessa, Stronghold in the South.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Officials of the Stalin government were reported on good authority last night to be evacuating Moscow, while three unhalted German offensives directly menaced the capital, and it appeared that Kazan, 450 miles to the east, was rapidly becoming the new seat of Soviet authority.

Censorship hid the full extent of the withdrawal, but some informants in London understood in fact that all governmental heads had departed, leaving Moscow a capital only in name and in the hands of the Red army.

Also leaving the capital, aside from the Russian functionaries, were United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt and his embassy staff. Withdrawn also were the Swedish and Japanese diplomatic personnel and apparently those of all other powers represented.

Odessa Reported Seized. While the Russian center was being pushed back toward disaster, the Red far southwestern anchor was declared to have been smashed. Both the Germans and the allied Rumanians announced that Odessa, on the Black sea, at last had fallen after 59 days of siege and thus that substantially the whole of the coast from the Rumanian frontier eastward to the Crimean peninsula approaches now was in German control.

Fighting of an almost incredible horror—where Russian women and half-grown children stood with smoking guns upon the last tragic barricades and struggled alongside the Red troops to the end—was said to be proceeding in flaming Odessa as the invaders sought to knock out the last pockets of resistance. Sometimes, said Axis dispatches, those barricades were the bodies of the Russian dead.

Radio Stations Move. Along that battlefield upon which so much depended, the situation from the Russian side was obscured by a dearth of all save official dispatches and it appeared that the Moscow radio stations were being moved to the hinterlands.

These dispatches spoke of the Red armies as being still "alive and struggling" with the aid of formidable tank reinforcements moved up to the battle lines, but in substance they acknowledged that the Nazis still were breaking through.

There was nothing, however, to suggest that Moscow was going to be abandoned by the military. British informants predicted a long struggle to come about the city.

The Germans for their part officially claimed that some of their columns were within 60 miles of Moscow from the west, and some Berlin observers suggested that this figure applied to main bodies of troops and that others probably were considerably more advanced.

The Nazi high command announced that the city was being evacuated.

Colombia Cabinet Quits Over Probe

BOGOTA, Oct. 16.—(P)—The Colombian cabinet resigned today after the chamber of deputies voted unanimously to investigate the sale of the steamship Boyaca by the War Department for $50,000.

The conservative opposition charged that the vessel—sold to a North American concern—was worth $200,000. War Minister Joaquin Martinez resigned first and the rest of the cabinet followed. President Santos accepted the resignations.

'Furriners' Founded University Where Governor Got Diploma

Now this may seem amazing and paradoxical! But—discovered, ascertained and verified, the Governor, who tossed that strikout ball at Dean Cocking on the grounds that he was a "furriner," and in turn precipitated the dismissal of the University of Georgia by the Southern Conference, is an alumnus of an institution which was founded by "furriners."

His alma mater, the University of Georgia, is the oldest chartered state university in America. And all because of those darn "furriners."

From the campus which was to produce the immortal patriot, Nathan Hale, the "furriner," there came into Georgia in 1755 a man, with far-sighted vision who along with two other Yale graduates, one of whom was a student under him, was to blaze a trail of state-supported education which now is universal.

Lyman Hall—Connecticut born settled in the colony of Georgia in 1755. Four-fifths of the colony was in Indian territory and the population a scant 75,000. He brought with him from New England a passion for learning and the idea of a state school was a child of his brilliant brain.

Named Governor in 1783, his entire endeavor was in the direction of education and on February 25, 1784, he had a measure passed by the legislature "creating a grant of 40,000 acres for the erection and building of an academy of higher teaching."

The following January, 1785, the solons enacted into law a supplementary measure which is now the charter of the University of Georgia. It was written by Abraham Baldwin, another "furriner," and a classmate of Hall's, for whom he had sent to become the school's first president.

Atlanta Becomes Peanut Capital of U.S.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

On the first of September Atlanta, without any fuss and feathers about it, quietly became the Arachis Hypogaea capital of the United States.

Arachis Hypogaea means nuts, to you.

To be specific, peanuts, goobers, pinders, or ground peas, depending on where you were raised.

Atlanta became the peanut capital with the removal here from Suffolk, Va., the capital of the old peanut growing region, of the National Peanut Council, a far-flung organization whose members are scattered everywhere, from the Pacific coast to Florida, from Virginia to Texas, and who represents every part of the $55,000,000 a year industry, from growers, brokers, processors, right on up the line to retailers.

The peanut council, which will hold its first directors' meeting here tomorrow, was formed in 1940 out of various other councils and associations which had looked after the welfare of the sundry branches of the peanut industry.

It came here, according to W. B. Jester, its secretary and treasurer, because the peanut growing area which 20 years ago was concentrated in Virginia, now stretches from Virginia to Texas across 14 states, making Georgia its geographical center. Another factor that figured in its location here is Georgia's tremendous peanut production, greater than any other state by far.

For instance this year, with the peanut crop off 14 per cent from its record of 1940—due mainly to drought—Georgia will harvest 507,000,000 pounds of peanuts for market, not counting a huge acreage which will be "hogged off" by turning the pigs on it.

While Georgia is growing 507,000,000 pounds of peanuts, North Carolina, her closest rival, will be producing 269,000,000 pounds, and Georgia's production will be greater than the total of 429,000,000 pounds that the three states of Virginia, Carolina and Tennessee will produce together. Which is not bad work for a state that up till the time the boll weevil came thought of the peanut as something you bought a sackful of to eat at the circus, or grew in bulk only as food for hogs.

In 95 out of Georgia's 159 counties peanuts are grown, with 38,291 farms in Georgia planting some 651,000 acres to peanuts for market. The resulting product means an income to the Georgia farmer of approximately $23,000,000 a year, which "ain't peanuts."

In fact, it's the state's biggest money crop, outside of cotton.

Georgia's peanut industry means a lot to the Atlanta banks, too, and next year will mean more. Last year nearly $18,000,000 of peanut money was handled by the Atlanta banks. Next year that figure is expected to top $20,000,000.

The directors of the National Peanut Council are the world's greatest authorities on the peanut. They know that the peanut is not a nut, but a pea. They know that men were eating peanuts a thousand years before Christ, but not so many as they eat today. They know the peanut came to this country with the African slave ships, and was known mainly in the Carolinas and Virginia until the War Between the States. Then Yankee soldiers found out how good the peanut was and spread the word all over the Union.

They know that the first peanut ever sold at a circus was sold by an old Italian, over the protest of Circus Owner P. T. Barnum, who didn't believe anybody would want to take their eyes off his wonders long enough to buy a sackful.

They know that the peanut is rich in proteins, fats, calcium, iron, phosphorus and vitamin B, and that one-half a salted peanut supplies enough extra calories to do one extra hour of intensive mental work.

They know that peanut, can be used as food in a hundred different ways, and if there is a shortage of gasoline in this country, peanuts can be used to make a good grade motor fuel.

Members of the council who will meet here are Roy E. Parrish, Camilla, Ga., president; J. H. Bryson, Dothan, Ala.; John Burroughs, Dallas, Texas; R. C. Holland, Edenton, N. C.; W. T. Parker, Waverly, Va.; H. G. Ray, Moultrie, Ga.; Richard Weekes, Eastland, Texas; W. P. Woodley, Norfolk, Va., and Ed Stevens, of Dawson, Ga.

Stevens' daughter, Carolyn, a student at the University of Georgia, has been chosen by the council to reign as their princess in the court of the Peanut Queen at the annual Peanut Festival, to be held in Suffolk, Va., late this month.

MILK SAVINGS—Mrs. T. D. Sewell, wife of the president of the Techwood-Clark Howell Tenants' Association, purchases 12 quarts of milk at a distributor's plant here yesterday. R. E. Stephens, employe of the distributor, is carrying it to her car. She got wholesale prices.

Women Discover Way To Defeat Milk Increase

By TOM McRAE.

Atlanta housewives have found a way to beat the price increase in milk. For years many of them each morning opened the front door, picked up the bottles and put them in the refrigerator. Now some of the housewives are going after it—and saving by buying in wholesale quantities.

Since the milk price increase, several Atlanta wholesale distributors report an increase in business from 15 to 20 per cent.

Housewives' Solution.

Side by side with retail distributors, these Atlanta housewives are buying their milk. Though prices of everything are going up, they decided they couldn't stop buying milk. The children had to have it.

While 12 to 20 quarts of milk are loaded into their cars, they will tell you the system they worked out. When the prices of delivered milk was upped to 16 cents, something had to be done about it, they said.

This is their solution: When you buy milk in three-gallon lots you can get it for 11 cents a quart. The hitch was, no one wanted three gallons. But that was a small obstacle for them to overcome. The women in a neighborhood merely got together and decided that each day one of them would buy for the whole neighborhood. Every day you can see them at the wholesale plants "loading up."

Urges Others Be Formed. In an address to the Atlanta Consumer Council last night Mrs. T. D. Sewell, wife of the president of the Techwood-Clark Howell Tenants Association, told of these "milk clubs" and urged the formation of others.

It is not necessary for the three gallons to be all sweet milk. Buttermilk can be substituted and if the youngsters absolutely refuse to drink it unless chocolate is added, then the purchaser can get chocolate milk under this plan.

Sometimes as few as two women go in together and they buy a week's supply at one time. Wholesale officials very promptly tell you correctly pasteurized may be kept a week with no trouble at all.

Distance No Problem. One of the downtown wholesalers says he has customers that come in from Buckhead, Decatur and College Park. One woman refused to give out any information, saying she was afraid "those milk board people" would interfere in some way with their ingenious little plan.

This trend toward wholesale purchasing does not seem to mean retail buying has decreased. In most cases dairies reported both wholesale and retail sales have gone up in the last several weeks. This, they said, is due to a near milk shortage in this area, caused by distributors selling the largest part of their supply to Army and CCC camps.

Contracts Are Awarded For 18 More Shipways

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(P)—The Maritime Commission announced today the signing of contracts for additional merchant shipbuilding facilities costing about $15,000,000 at five existing shipyards. The contracts provide for the construction of 18 additional shipways, and two outfitting piers.

The contracts included: Alabama Dry Dock and Shipbuilding Company, Mobile, Ala., eight ways; Louisiana Ship Yards, Inc., New Orleans, two ways; Richmond Shipbuilding Corporation, Richmond, Cal., three ways; South Portland Shipbuilding Corporation, South Portland, Maine, two ways and two outfitting piers; Ingalls Shipbuilding Corporation, Pascagoula, Miss., three ways.

RIGHT TO THE DOORSTEPS—Yesterday was Mrs. Sewell's day to buy milk, at wholesale prices, for the "milk club" in her neighborhood. She is shown handing Mrs. J. G. Giaffis and Miss Judy their share. The members of the "club" take turns at going to the distributors for their day's supply, which must be at least three gallons to get the wholesale rate of 11 cents a quart, a savings of five cents.

Ralph McGill Warns Against Colorful Demagogues

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Atlanta Constitution, warned tonight against election to office of "picturesque demagogues who will promise to reduce taxes and, because of that promise, will be permitted to debase the schools, corrupt the official system, debase human thought and liberty."

In a discussion of freedom of the press, McGill told delegates to an Agricultural Adjustment Administration regional conference that fearless editors often had fought against governmental suppression.

"In our times," he continued, "in the present decade we have seen it tried just twice. The late Huey Long tried in Louisiana to do every harm he could to the newspapers of the state."

"In Georgia, the present Governor has tried, within the past month, to suppress news and to keep it from the newspapers."

"Both of them said the same thing: they kept telling the people that the newspapers were liars. They kept up a constant refrain that the newspapers were not fair to them."

"I glory in Jim Crow, the editor of the States in New Orleans, who kept on fighting a little harder than anyone else until at last he was able to break open a story of corruption and debasement which staggered the whole nation. The people found, as they always will find, that the newspapers, while they make human errors, are not lying."

"We see too often businessmen and professional men who are willing to accept a bad Governor or a bad public official if he will promise to let alone their own particular sphere of life or business."

"They think they will save something in taxes, forgetting that in the end they lose all."

"Remember: special privilege put Hitler in power."

McGill appeared at the southern division conference of the AAA, which was devoted largely to a study of means for producing more food to help fight Hitler.

R. M. Evans, head of the AAA, told the audience of dire needs in England, and urged southern farmers to do their part in winning the war by feeding the British.

Clarke Jurors Score Regents And Governor

Removal of University From Politics Is Advocated.

The Clarke county grand jury yesterday called upon the next session of the general assembly to remove the University of Georgia from the "political dominance of the present Governor or any other Governor that may be at the head of the state in the future."

The grand jury's presentments strongly scored the Governor and a majority of his Board of Regents for what was termed "undue political interference" in the operation of the university.

For the second time the grand jury also refused to adopt the administration-sponsored "secret ballot law," passed at the last session of the assembly, which becomes effective upon approval by one grand jury. The jury characterized the act, after "mature deliberation," as one that would "open the gates to fraud and ballot stuffing."

Elsewhere quiet reigned, after the noisy but orderly protest of 1,000 University of Georgia students who Wednesday marched upon the capitol to protest the actions of the Governor and a majority of the regents in regard to the university system.

At Valdosta, the Governor, in an interview before speaking to the Georgia Peace Officers' Association, commented on the student protest march by saying that he believed they didn't know all the angles behind the ousting of Dean Walter Cocking, for allegedly promoting white and Negro education. He made no comment on the dropping of the university from the ranks of the Southern University Association because of the ouster.

The shakeup in the University System faculty, he said, will eventually lead to a greater and better university for the state.

On the university campus at Athens also was quiet. Alpha Epsilon, campus leader, and Harley Bowers, editor of the Red and Black, two leaders in the student protests, were en route to New York with the Georgia football team.

On the same train, bound also for the Georgia-Columbia game, was Carleton Mobley, the Governor's secretary, to whom Fowler on Wednesday had presented a petition urging the Governor to free the university of political domination by asking the resignation of his newly appointed regents.

The Governor previously had been invited to make the trip as the guest of the team, and had accepted, saying he would go along "to help drum up a crowd." With a speech before the Future Farmers at Macon scheduled for tonight, he did not go.

was not begun until 1801 and by this time Baldwin, who had been president on paper, and was now a United States senator, resigned. He was replaced by Josiah Meigs, whom he had taught at Yale.

The site chosen was on a hill overlooking the Oconee River—683 acres purchased by John Milledge and donated to the state. It was on the very fringe of Indian Territory and at the farthest point from the nearest city—Augusta.

The initial building was patterned after a "furrin" hall—Old Connecticut Hall at Yale—and oftentimes it has been many a Georgian's pleasure to notice the striking resemblance between Old College and Old Connecticut Hall.

Old-timers in Athens—and the story has been handed down for generations—tell that brick for Old College was sent from England to Savannah. There they were placed on river barges and navigated to Augusta. But how to get them from Augusta to the forest 100 miles away was the problem. So it was solved by being brick being placed in covered wagons, slaves being employed to hew a roadway with state militiamen along to fight off the Indians.

Such is Georgia's heritage! On that somber October afternoon in 1829 when the blue hosts of Yale were engaged in the University of Georgia's red-clads in the Sanford stadium dedicatory imbroglio doubtless there were hundreds among the capacity throngs who wondered just why the sons of Eli had traveled south for the first time—farther southward than any Yale football team had ever been before. Previously their longest jaunt toward the Mason-Dixon line had been the shuttle hop from New York to Princeton.

The answer is obvious. They were paying tribute to one of their sons—now a stepson—joining Georgia in a celebration which marked another era in the University's march toward national recognition.

credited list. This is the one thing we ask of the Governor.

"We apologize for the interruption and inconvenience caused by the Atlanta and Athens people by our motorcade, but sincerely believe the gravity of the occasion more than warrants all of this. However many of them may come to your attention, the vast majority of our students have refrained from all unkind pictures and posters and remarks in derogation of any individual, and those that appeared were no part of our official demonstrations.

"One elderly man at the capitol Wednesday, long experienced in motorcades, remarked that ours was one of the biggest, yet the most orderly he had ever witnessed. Are not these facts sufficient proof of our earnestness?"

Governor Talmadge, people of Georgia, we please with you to save our schools."

Four Negroes Injured In Crash at Forsyth

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. FORSYTH, Ga., Oct. 16.—Four Negroes were injured, three of them critically, in a wreck of two trucks on Route 42, within the city limits of Forsyth this morning.

The trucks, reported as owned by V. A. Smith, of Thomaston, were both traveling south and failed to make a curve, and plunged over a deep embankment. Both trucks were completely demolished and flattened out by the heavy lumber they were carrying.

Restore vital digestive juices in the stomach... energize your body with rich, red blood. Here's how!

If you are one of those unfortunate who have worked under a strain, failed to eat the proper foods, have been vexed by overtaxing worries, or have suffered with colds, the flu, or other illness... yet have no organic trouble or real infection, and your red blood cells have become reduced in vitality and number... if your stomach direction refuses to work properly, there is good news for you!

Georgia Ouster Seen Affecting High Schools

Allman, However, Disagrees With Opinions of McCain, Cox.

Opinion of local educators was divided yesterday as to the effect the action taken by the Southern University Conference in dropping the University of Georgia will have on high schools of the state.

While John T. Allman, state school administrator, expressed the opinion the ruling would not affect high schools, Dr. J. R. McCain, president of Agnes Scott College, and Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of Emory University, stated that the action will indirectly affect every high school in the state.

"The high schools of Georgia are not involved in the controversy," was the statement of Allman.

"The ruling undoubtedly will affect them," Dr. McCain said. "Our whole educational program is so closely tied together that what happens to one happens to all. If one suffers then all will suffer in a way. The private institution will suffer, too."

"While the private schools will not be officially affected by the action, they will be injured through their sympathetic relations and activities."

"I am afraid it will disturb our whole educational program."

Dr. Cox, while stressing the point that there will not be any direct effect on the high schools, said he was of the opinion that in the long run it will affect them.

"Many of Georgia's high school students were working with the University of Georgia as their objective," Dr. Cox said. "If Georgia is not an accredited institution, then their morale will naturally be affected, and the high school student will let down in his work."

Here A. Wells, superintendent of the Fulton county school system, stated he was unable to say whether the ruling will have any effect, pointing out that he is not familiar with the Southern University Conference.

Church Will Give Benefit Barbecue

A barbecue, to raise funds toward payment for a new church school building constructed last year by the First Methodist church in East Point, will be sponsored by the church from noon until 6 o'clock tomorrow night at the corner of North Church and Ware avenue in East Point.

The three-story building was constructed at a cost of $30,000, and includes departmental rooms and a recreation hall.

The Rev. E. C. Wilson is pastor of the church and R. E. Carter is church school superintendent.

Some 5 per cent of all registrants examined by local boards have been turned down because of lack of education. Minimum education requirement is the equivalent of the fourth grade in grammar school.

Today, at 21, with artificial limbs, he can walk, eat with a knife and fork, shave himself, write letters, tie his shoelaces, drive his automobile, and earn his living as a machine operator in an artificial limb plant.

Japanese Cabinet Collapses as Result Of U. S. Impasse

TOKYO, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Prince Fumimaro Konoye's third Japanese government collapsed tonight in the face of a grave impasse on national policy toward the United States and Soviet Russia. The cabinet, not three months old and occupied during most of its tenure with circuitous Washington negotiations and indecisive uneasiness over the consequences or opportunities offered to Japan by Germany's war with Russia, resigned en bloc.

Tokyo Crisis Fits Hitler's Moscow Plans

Undercover Pressure in Japan Blamed by Kirke Simpson.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.
Thundering Nazi blows on the outer gates of Moscow find a distant but dramatic echo on the Tokyo end of the German-Italian-Japanese Axis.

Whatever else the Japanese cabinet crisis may mean, it is too closely interlocked with the developing siege of Moscow not to be regarded as an important piece dropping into place in the jig-saw puzzle of Hitler's war plans.

Whether Berlin's guarded hints that the capitulation of Moscow is immediately impending is justified remains to be seen. There is no reasonable doubt, however, that Nazi undercover pressure in Tokyo, timed to coincide closely with the German investment of Moscow, had something to do with the Konoye cabinet upset.

There is sound military reason for Hitler to seek some sort of threatening Japanese gesture just now, whether aimed specifically at Russia or at the American aid-for-Russia effort. Moscow's defenses are crumbling under the hammering of Nazi armies which at some points are only about 60 miles from the Kremlin nerve center of Communism.

Hitler's headquarters has drawn a grim picture of Russian Army collapse in the west. More than 6,000,000 Russian soldiers have been killed, crippled or captured within 16 weeks, according to the German war bookkeeping. Berlin sees Russian resistance in the west reduced to a hodge-podge of embattled civilians and remnants of shattered divisions which escaped German traps.

That does not cover, however, Russia's eastern armies, never until now engaged in the struggle. In the east, Russia has been credited with maintaining powerful and well equipped forces, watching the Japanese member of the Axis. Only recently have Moscow advances indicated that some part of these eastern armies, including Cossacks of legendary fame as fighting men, were being brought up to bolster the defenses of the city.

Tokyo Gesture.
It seems beyond question that a Tokyo gesture just now which might evolve into an attack on the far eastern flank of the Soviets could halt the transfer of Red Army forces from east to west.

The Tokyo cabinet crisis must be viewed in Moscow as a tentative tapping at Russia's back door to match the hammer blows of the Germans in the west. Thus Russia's troubles are increased at a perilous hour.

They are grave enough on the Moscow front and elsewhere with out any added complication. The announcement from Hitler's headquarters that Kalinin, to the northwest of Moscow, and Kaluga to the west, are in German hands adds nothing. Both key points on the western perimeter of Moscow's defenses have been concededly under German domination for some time.

South of Moscow.
There is an unofficial claim in Berlin now, however, of further encroachments south of Moscow. Italian troops are credited with a share in an advance eastward to a new and important junction town from which four rail systems of the Moscow rail web fan out.

That must mean new Axis thrusts due south of Moscow. Italian allies have not before been mentioned in Nazi war bulletins except on the Ukraine sector, participating in the encirclement and capture of Kiev. Communication necessities tend to dictate employment of the Italians below the Moscow zone. They probably would be hurried northward only if a triumphal march into Moscow was considered imminent.

Psychological Blow.
Meanwhile, if Odessa finally has been taken, or given to the flames by evacuating Red forces, it represents more of a psychological than a military blow to the Russians. Its ultimate surrender has been forecast since the Nazi break-through east of the Dnieper bend and the siege of the Crimean isthmus. Militarily, it was no longer worth the price of holding. To the extent that troops from the city can reinforce those in the Crimea or the Caucasus, abandonment of a ruined Odessa would seem a wise Russian move.

The time may come when the same argument could apply to Moscow; but not yet. A long siege seems still in the cards there, an exhausting test which might rob Hitler of decisive victory this year.

Recreation Fund For Army Okayed

Presidential approval of a $137,920 project to provide recreational facilities in Atlanta for enlisted men in the armed services was announced at Washington yesterday by the Federal Works Agency.

Of the total cost, $108,000 will be borne by the Federal Works Agency, and $29,920 by the city, the latter representing value of a lot comprising at least half an acre adjoining the municipal auditorium.

Present plans call for construction of a recreational building on the lot which will include club rooms, baths, pool tables, etc. The front will conform with the architecture of the auditorium building.

AFL Calls Stalin Bad as Hitler, But Urges Aid

SEATTLE, Oct. 16.—(AP)—With caustic criticism of Communism the American Federation of Labor in the closing hours of its convention today recommended full assistance to Russia in its fight against Nazism.

The resolutions committee's proposal carried even stronger denunciation of Communistic practices than did the executive council's report.

The adopted resolution said: "It is the opinion of your committee that a victory by Stalin over other countries in Europe would be as disastrous to free institutions as a victory by Hitler." "It is the sincere hope of your committee, now that Great Britain and her allies are actively assisting that country and the United States is supplying all material and assistance possible, that this will lead the government of Russia to refrain, when war is over, from continuing its propaganda."

The resolution denounced Communism as being "just as dangerous to the American institutions as in the past," adding: "Russia, in her present effort of national defense, has indicated no change in her policy towards the forms of democracy in other countries. The proper and active support which the United States is giving to Russia now is not because of the change in our attitude toward Communism, but to assist a people, brutally attacked, to defend themselves."

The convention concurred in the executive council recommendation that aid to Russia was dictated by practical military necessity because the whole American war program was directed toward defeat of Russia's enemy.

The resolution was adopted without debate.

The convention followed up this action with unanimous adoption of three national defense resolutions submitted by the California and Indiana state federation delegates.

One pledged the federation to "the moral unity demanded by an unlimited national emergency" and called on the federal government "to take any steps, thought wise by the administration, with the advice and consent of congress, acting on the advice of the United States Army chief of staff, the secretary of the Navy, and other responsible agencies, to keep at its maximum efficiency the United States Army, Navy and defense program."

Another urged "whatever action is deemed necessary by the administration to make sure that American aid reaches its intended destination."

The third "resolved, that we, the delegates in convention assembled, reiterate that this war must be won.

"We say this and accept our full responsibilities in saying it."

Approval of Ship Bill Assured After House Debates Into Night

OUTSTANDING SPEAKERS—Speakers at the Georgia Municipal Association convention at the Ansley Hotel are shown here in the roof garden, where the eighth annual meeting is in progress. Mayor George Carpenter, of Milledgeville (left) and Daniel Hoan, associate director of civilian defense, Washington (center), were yesterday's principal speakers. Mayor Thomas Gamble, of Savannah, will address the association today.

Municipal Association Meets Here; Wilson Raps 'Local Bills'

Secretary of State John B. Wilson said yesterday "the efficiency of the general assembly would be improved 100 per cent" if it were freed of acting on measures of purely local application.

He pointed out that a measure to effect this, the so-called Burgin bill, had been bandied about the general assembly for years and had passed both branches, but never at the same session.

Says Bill "Sound."

In his address to the Georgia Municipal Association in convention here, Wilson became the first of various possible candidates for Governor next year to come out in favor of eliminating local legislation from the consideration of the general assembly.

He described the Burgin bill as sound and progressive and declared it would be beneficial to the cities and counties as well as the state.

Enactment of the measure, he said, would enable the legislature to "proceed largely with matters state-wide in their character, leaving to you people matters of only local concern."

"As a result, full deliberation could be had on all state-wide legislation and the calendars of the general assembly would not be congested. That is as it should be."

Legislation Failed.

Legislation to accomplish this was offered unsuccessfully at the last session by Senator H. B. Edwards, of Valdosta. The control over local matters vested in the general assembly enables senators and representatives to wield more power in their own bailiwicks, and this generally has been regarded as a principal impediment to enactment.

Wilson also cited the increasing centralization of state control over education, public highways, welfare, taxation and law enforcement, and said this had been accompanied by a corresponding tendency of more liberal state support for cities and counties.

Thomas Gamble, mayor of Savannah, will address the association today on "Some Problems of Georgia Municipalities," after which four Georgia city officials will lead a round-table discussion on local problems and suggestions for solving them.

Leaders Selected.

Leaders will be Mayor P. M. Lancaster, of Sylvester; City Manager Fred Roark, of Gainesville; City Clerk R. R. Jones, of Dawson, and A. M. Zellner, city attorney, of Forsyth.

Fish Declares He Will Ballot To Arm Vessels

Another Republican Castigates Colleagues Who Oppose Everything.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Evidence of Republican disunity on the question of arming merchant ships multiplied today as the house debated that issue at a session which ran into the night and cleared the way for a final vote, and assured approval, tomorrow.

First, Representative Fish, Republican, New York, frequent critic of administration foreign policy, announced he intended to vote for the bill repealing the neutrality act's prohibition against putting guns on merchantmen.

Warns Republicans.

Then, Representative Cluett, Republican, New York, sharply criticized the opposition he said had come from a majority of house Republicans to "practically every move made by the President and his advisers in the departments of the Army and Navy to bring to this country that security which is vital to us and to those who are fighting for us and the principles we espouse."

Asking whether this opposition was sincere or was born of political expedience, he declared:

"If this antagonism is a political maneuver, it will prove to be not only a death blow to the Republican party, but a disservice to the nation which will never be forgotten or forgiven."

Nor was Cluett sparing of Democrats in congress. Declaring it had been "an amazing sight" to witness the attitude of both sides in the house toward the question of this country's participation in the world crisis, Cluett said, "If we had relied solely on the advice of congress, the country would probably be in the same position it was two years ago."

Denounces Waste.

He continued: "Fortunately, the administration has been clear-headed enough and farsighted enough to sense the peril which step by step, but with ever-increasing danger, has been approaching this nation."

Although he denounced delays and waste in the defense program, Cluett said, "The New Deal can wait for its purging at the proper time."

"Give me the leadership of a rector of the United States office of civilian defense and for 24 years mayor of Milwaukee, advised the municipal officials yesterday of a part they could play in fostering better relations with South America."

Advocating several concrete plans, such as teaching Spanish in the public schools, Hoan concluded: "The only way to solve some of our problems today is to go back to the Sermon on the Mount and do away with selfishness."

President George S. Carpenter, mayor of Milledgeville, said local self-government will "face the crucial test in the days ahead." He said "municipal fiscal policies have got to be adjusted to do away with nonessentials," but must go ahead promoting expansion in such services as health, education, conservation of natural resources, rural and urban housing.

About 300 officials from 150 cities throughout Georgia are attending the two-day convention.

"Quite Good Weavers." The young Dutch girl had never seen a Negro. And the government wanted her reaction as to the potential skill of which the race might be capable as weavers. "I found them to be quite good weavers," she reported.

Miss Van Hall is on a holiday in Atlanta between jobs, the guest of Mrs. Allen Shipp. She goes from here to Washington, D. C., and will spend the winter in New York city, "if all goes well."

"I want to go to South America, too, before I return home," she added. "My brother lives in Peru, and I am most anxious to see the weaving there."

When it was ventured that she had been bitten pretty fatally by the "wandering bug," her ready smile admitted it, but she replied rather soberly:

Wants to Travel.

"I want to see every place that I can, for when I return home, and the war is over, we will all be so poor that we won't be able to leave our dwellings."

Weaving is a good thing for all to know, she believes. If people can fashion their own "longies" and raise a patch of turnip greens, after it's all over, they will be better off, thinks Miss Van Hall. InsigniaRSKtWkgmtashrdetashrdet

Gallup Poll Reveals:

N.Y. Lagging on Foreign Policy

By GEORGE GALLUP.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion. (Copyright, 1941)

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 16.—Students of political trends, particularly as related to foreign policy, will give major attention this fall to two elections—the New York mayoralty and the congressional campaign in the Fifteenth Pennsylvania district.

Since elections always involve personalities as well as issues, they are frequently misleading as a guide to public sentiment on specific issues of the day. If on November 4 the registered voters of New York city, in addition to voting on F. H. LaGuardia, William O'Dwyer and the other candidates for mayor, could also register their vote on foreign policy and on a leading domestic issue such as strikes, how would they vote?

City Under Average.

Results show that despite the fact that New York city gave Roosevelt a higher proportion of its vote in 1940 than did the country at large, the city is under the national average so far as approval of Roosevelt's foreign policy is concerned. The common assumption that New York city is one of the nation's strongest centers of interventionist sentiment apparently needs revision in the light of these findings.

While administration foreign policy is still favored by a substantial majority, the following table shows how far that vote falls below the average for the country. The difference in sentiment may play an important part in determining the fate of the LaGuardia administration at the polls.

"In general do you approve or disapprove of President Roosevelt's foreign policy?" Those expressing an opinion voted as follows:

NEW YORK CITY VOTERS REGISTERED TO VOTE IN COMING ELECTION

Approve 65%
Disapprove 33%

ENTIRE NATION

Approve 76%
Disapprove 24%

Opinion was likewise measured on the issue of handling strikes in the defense industries. On that subject, the majority of those polled favor a step which the Roosevelt administration has hesitated to take—the forbidding by law of strikes in defense industries.

New York city is considerably less favorable to such a program than the rest of the country, judging by the poll results.

A comparison between the New York vote and the national vote on the same issue in the last reported Institute survey is shown below:

Should the government forbid strikes in defense industries, or should the workers in those industries continue to have the right to go on strike?"

Those with opinions voted as follows:

NEW YORK REGISTERED VOTERS

Should Forbid Strikes 63%
Should Have Right to Strike 37

THE NATION.

Should Forbid Strikes 80
Should Have Right to Strike 20

Shipbuilding Workers Are To Get Pay Raise

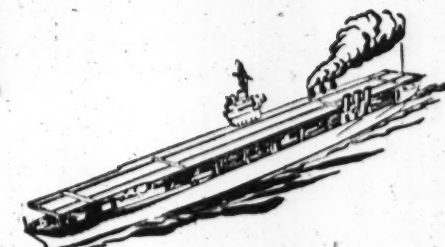

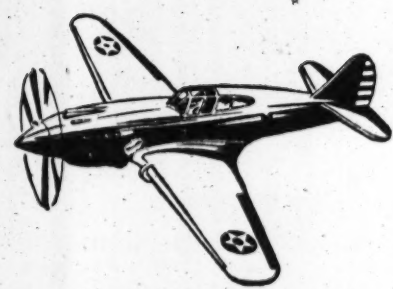

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(AP)—The Navy Department announced tonight that pay increases had been authorized for thousands of civilian workers in Navy shipbuilding yards on the Atlantic coast, effective as of last Monday.

The increases have been designed to bring Navy yard wage rates from Maine to Georgia into line with rates paid in commercial yards. The increases will vary from one locality to another. Therefore, officials here would make no estimate as to the average percentage of raise, the number of workers affected nor the total amount of additional money which will go out in the next pay envelopes.

Previously, wages had been increased on the Pacific coast and in other sections of the country where Navy shipyards operate. The present Atlantic wage rates have been in effect since November, 1940.

DRY LEADERS—Georgia W. C. T. U. leaders brought their fifty-eighth annual convention to a close here yesterday. Pictured at the reception are: Mrs. Robert Miller, Waynesboro, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Mary Scott Russell, Atlanta, president; Mrs. Robert Travelute, Moultrie, recording secretary; Mrs. W. C. Mrs. Russell Again Heads State W. C. T. U.

Parley Hears Youth Leader Predict U. S. Going Dry Again.

Several hundred leaders of the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance Union brought their state convention here to a close last night.

Mrs. Mary Scott Russell, of Atlanta, was re-elected president along with four other major officers who were returned to their posts for another year. Mrs. Peter Manning, of Atlanta, was re-elected vice president; Mrs. R. L. Miller, of Waynesboro, was named corresponding secretary; Mrs. Robert Travelute, of Moultrie, recording secretary, and Mrs. Wilbur Brown, of Griffin, treasurer.

Dr. T. C. Gardner, young people's leader of Dallas, sounded the keynote of the convention in a speech last night by declaring, "The day is coming when the United States will be dry and I am inclined to think that day is not far distant. We need now a program of alcohol education to prevent the social evils rather than spending millions on the prevention of crime resulting from alcohol."

Dr. Gardner told of a "youth march" on the capitol of Texas last February to block a "drug-store liquor bill" and expressed the hope that young people will "march on each state capitol during each legislature."

3-Day County Fair Is Opened At Summerville

Two Tents Required To House Livestock Exhibits.

By L. C. SMITH.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
SUMMERVILLE, Ga., Oct. 16.—The Chattooga County Fair opened here this morning for a three-day showing of the various products of Chattooga county. The fair is being held on the athletic field at the Summerville High school, the school gymnasium being used for all exhibits with the exception of livestock, which are being housed in two large tents on the fair grounds.

Fair officials state that indications for this year's fair will be the best in several years, especially in the agricultural and livestock departments. Last year only one large tent was used for livestock, but the increase in exhibits in this department this year made it necessary to use two tents.

There is one exhibit in the gymnasium, sponsored by all agricultural workers in the county, which is educational and worth a great deal to the farmers from the standpoint of "live at home," and to the government from a standpoint of national defense. This display shows the actual amount of food and feed which can be raised on the farm and which is necessary for carrying out a balanced ration for the people and livestock on the farm.

The Soil Conservation Service has as its part in the fair a plan from the standpoint of conserving the soil and the necessary acreage for each of the crops to be planted in order to raise the foods and feeds, which are displayed.

The fair will close Saturday night. O. P. Dawson, Chattooga county agent, is president of the fair association; James L. McGinnis is vice president; Homer M. Woods, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. Wright Wheeler, assistant secretary and treasurer.

Dalton School To Get Defense Equipment Fund

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
DALTON, Ga., Oct. 16.—The federal security agency of the United States Office of Education has approved an application for equipment in the amount of $12,804.65 to be used at Dalton High school for defense course classes in the city, it was announced today by Walter W. Stencil, superintendent of schools.

Orders for the following equipment will be placed by Jack Lee, supervisor of defense classes here, to use the allotment for Dalton: Welding shop equipment, $2,239.42; radio shop equipment, $838.88; sheet metal equipment, $1,951.00; and machine shop equipment, $7,775.35.

A total of 321 adult members are enrolled in defense classes here and in addition to a large number who have secured employment locally, workers have been sent to the Albany airport, Charleston Navy yards and to Chester, Penn., for dry dock work. All national defense work here is under the management of the city board of education.

Vichy Formally Blames Six for Fall of France

Pétain Names Leaders Once Popular Among French Voters.

VICHY, Unoccupied France, Oct. 16.—(AP)—With the hindsight reflected by a specially chosen council of political justice, Marshal Pétain placed the blame for France's defeat today on six men who were returned to office time and again by French voters.

In a broadcast to the nation the chief of state announced that a public trial would be held for five of the six, who already have been in prison for more than a year.

As far as the accused ministers are concerned, the marshal's decision failed to change their position. They are in prison awaiting trial.

The accusation submitted to Pétain by the council concerned: Former Premier Edouard Daladier, who until the defeat of France was hailed universally in his country as "the bull-necked strong man of France";

Military Expert, Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin, who before the Battle of France was considered "the greatest military expert since Napoleon";

Former Premier Leon Blum, who rose to power with a popular front of leftist parties as "one of the greatest socialists since Marx";

Pierre Laval, former administrator of national defense industries, considered by his colleagues to be one of the most advanced technicians in France;

Guy La Chambre, who gave up a life of ease as one of France's wealthiest men to become air minister when the nation's aviation was in a hole;

Pierre Cot, another former air minister, accused of weakening France's air preparations.

Air Minister. Cot, who fled to the United States, was not mentioned by the marshal in his broadcast. Paul Reynaud, the last premier of the French republic, and Georges Mandel, his minister of interior, were held in fortress somewhere. Pétain declared there were "grave presumptions" against them, but said nothing of a trial.

The charges against each of the accused interlocked, each virtually being accused of faults for which the others are to be tried.

The most universal of these was the effort to nationalize defense industries. For Daladier, the accusation charged that "the supreme war council was not consulted as it should have been, obligatorily, on questions relative to preparation for war."

Blum, who was premier from June 4, 1936, to June 22, 1937, was accused of having known of "deficiencies of national defense" and of "neglecting to give to armament factories the impetus which the situation urgently commanded."

Unpreparedness Charged. Jacomet was accused of having hidden by silences and inexactitudes even in December, 1939, that France was not ready morally and materially in the military, political and economic domains.

La Chambre was said to have been unable to correct the situation he found upon becoming Daladier's air minister. "He seems not to have lacked good will but to have lacked will power," the statement said. The council recommended that in view of his return to France after flight to the United States he should not be judged one of the principals.

Cot was accused of having weakened France's air preparations by "limiting credits, nationalizing factories, discouraging the high command and furnishing planes to the Spanish popular front."

Pétain said the trial of the minister, at Riom, would be without appeal and would "mark the final point of one of the most sorrowful points of the life of France."

Case Against State Officials Is Continued

U. S. Examiner Irwin Overrules Motion To Dismiss Charges.

By The Associated Press.

A motion to dismiss charges that seven Labor Department officials violated the federal Hatch act in last year's general election was overruled yesterday by James I. Irwin, United States Civil Service Commission examiner.

He said he would not be justified in sustaining the constitutional questions raised in the motion but pointed out his ruling was subject to later review by the commission.

Actual hearings on the charges against the defendants will not start until Monday, when the case against Rex P. Huffman, clearance officer in auditing division, will be tried. The delay was agreed upon to give witnesses and the Labor Department officials advance notice.

Stewart Case Wednesday. The cases of J. E. B. Stewart, director of the Bureau of Unemployment compensation, and Ralph Macon, field supervisor of the unemployment compensation division, were set for Wednesday, and the others will follow on Friday or thereafter.

The right of the defendants to refuse to testify against themselves was conceded by the examiner and was upheld earlier in the week by Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood in legal action directly affecting Stewart and Huffman.

For the remainder of the week the principal concern will be to establish the commission's jurisdiction. This involves the technicality of showing that the federal government contributes financially to the support of the department's employment service and unemployment compensation division.

Charges Against Huiet.

The commission made public a copy of the charges against Labor Commissioner Ben T. Huiet. This showed he was accused of commanding and coercing Labor Department employees to contribute part of their salaries to a campaign fund for the November, 1940, general election in violation of the Hatch act.

Charges against the other six officials, who included Marion A.

O'Connor, director of the employment service division; A. F. Scott, in, manager of the employment service's Atlanta office, and George W. Atwood, administrative aide, were similar.

BERRY PICKERS CALLED.

School children, Boy Scouts and girls were "called up" to form blackberrying squads to bring in England's bumper crop of berries for jam and bottling. The berries are turned over to local co-operative preserving centers.

Business Good as Atlanta Gets 89 News Firms months were 18 per cent higher than the same period last year, while sales for August were 30 per cent above those of July.

The Atlanta Federal Reserve district also showed a 5 per cent increase in department store sales in the week ended October 11, over the similar period last year.

Telephone installations are regarded generally as a good barometer of business. There were 102,088 telephones in use in Atlanta at the end of September, compared with 92,659 phones at the same time last year, according to the Industrial Bureau.

Brisk industrial activity for the entire Bell System is reflected in an earnings' report released yesterday.

American Telephone & Telegraph Company and principal subsidiaries—the Bell System—reported net income applicable to A. T. & T. stock in the three months ended August 31 was $45,073,155, equal to $2.41 a share.

This compared with $44,526,684, or $2.38 in the corresponding period in 1940.

For American Telephone & Telegraph Company net income for the quarter ended September 30 was $47,240,803, equal to $2.53 a share, compared with revised net income of $44,375,343 or $2.37 a share in the September quarter of 1940.

Bell System earnings for the year ended August 31, applicable to A. T. & T. stock, were reported at $201,513,370 or $10.78 a share, compared with $204,093,251 or $10.92 a share in the same period ended a year earlier.

More Telephones In Use. However A. T. & T. earnings for 12 months ended September 30, subject to revision, were $196,096,456, equal to $10.49 a share against revised net income of $182,912,202 or $9.79 a share in the 12 months ended September 30, 1940.

Walter S. Gifford, president of A. T. & T., yesterday reported toll and long distance conversations during the first nine months of 1941 were 16 per cent greater than in the like period of 1940, and that the number of long distance calls was up about 29 per cent.

He also said the Bell System had a net gain of about 1,007,900 telephones in the first nine months of this year, compared with a gain of 646,900 during the corresponding period last year.

Gain in Telephones. The gain in telephones for the third quarter was 334,300, compared with 197,800 for the third quarter of 1940. The gain in September was the highest monthly gain in the history of the business, Gifford announced.

Brightening the prospect for the farmer, the Agriculture Department predicted yesterday that farmers probably would receive present high prices for their cottonseed, soybeans and peanuts in 1942 even though the production of soybeans and peanuts may be substantially increased.

Demand for fats and oils at the present is reported at the highest level in 20 years.

Because of the favorable demand situation and a decline in imports of oil seeds due to shipping losses and other difficulties, the department has asked farmers to increase their peanut and soybean acreage.

East Point Water System Hits Snag

Construction on East Point's new water system, already slowed by a shortage of skilled WPA workers, struck another snag yesterday—a superior court restraining order.

W. E. Graves, owner of "bottom lands" on both sides of Sweetwater Creek, below the city's pipe line, filed petition claiming his property would be "irreparably damaged" if East Point draws a million gallons of water a day from the creek as proposed.

The creek is 11 miles from the city and Graves maintains East Point has no right to condemn property outside its limits. Judge John D. Humphries set a hearing on the case for October 24.

COYOTE DIET. C. L. Weaver, Junior High school teacher in Ashland, Cal., conducted an autopsy on a coyote he had killed. He found that the animal had been living largely on grasshoppers.

Council Body Turns Down Jook Permits

Committee Refuses To Recommend Six Applications.

City council's police committee last night opened war against alleged dives and jook joints and refused to recommend permits for operation at six locations as it invoked authority of a new ordinance passed by council September 4.

Three of the six places—247 Pryor street, S. W.; 288 Pryor street, S. W.; and 212 Whitehall street—were asked by F. M. Jones, and one at 667 Rhodes street, S. W., was sought by Charlie Mae Sims. The other petitioners whose applications were adverse by the committee were Major Elbert Dawson, 461 Stonewall street, S. W., and Mrs. Mary Bess Hills and E. L. Crozier, 164 Whitehall street, S. W.

Alderman G. Dan Bridges, committee chairman, said the ordinance "is one of the best ever passed in Atlanta for the promotion of clean business and the elimination of places operated by persons having police records which make them undesirable."

The committee action was unanimous after a lengthy hearing on the Jones petitions. Police officers cited an alleged long record of brushes with the law.

Committee members said last night's action is just a beginning, and that places with unsavory reputations will be closed under the ordinance. After the Jones hearing, there were indications that an effort will be made to attack the law. Jones was represented by Attorney Guy Tyler.

Patrolman W. G. Scott was exonerated of charges of drinking on duty on testimony of physicians that they prescribed hypnotics for a physical ailment, but Scott asked for and was granted a leave of absence without pay to get well.

The committee said if his own doctor and the city physician convinced Chief Hornsby that he was able to resume duty within 10 days, he could return to work without further loss of time.

They implied that Moscow's outer defenses were principally of the dugout rather than permanent type.

Authorized German commentators summed up with the claim that the final collapse of the Soviet military power—presumably they meant in the west—was in sight since, they said, Stalin's command had brought up the last of their material reserves before Moscow.

As to Odessa, both the German and Rumanian commands issued communiques claiming—in the face of Rumanian military dispatches circulated by the official German news agency which told of terrible struggles by Russian civilians as well as soldiers—that the invaders had been received "enthusiastically."

The elderly artist was believed to have been struck over the head with a blunt instrument. No motive could be established. Detectives J. J. Chester and E. R. Hilderbrand have been investigating the case.

Utilities Group Favors Control By Agreement

Prefers This to Regulation Enforced by Federal Power Body.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 16.—(AP)—The Utilities Commission, in a statement of policy on proposed creation of a power pool in southeastern states to meet a threatened power shortage, said it favored power control by voluntary agreement rather than through control enforced by the Federal Power Commission.

Commissioner A. B. Hill, who attended a meeting of southeastern utilities commissioners on the power situation in Atlanta several days ago, said curtailment of power in southeastern states would be necessitated if there was no rainfall in that area by November 15 or December 1.

Moscow Arms Her Children With Rifles and Hand Grenades

LONDON, Oct. 17.—(Friday)—(INS)—Every able-bodied man, woman and child in Moscow is being armed with a rifle, 50 cartridges, and 10 hand grenades for the defense of their city, the London Daily Express said today in a dispatch from Stockholm.

Barbed wire and sandbags have been taken to every corner in the city, ready for immediate use in barricades, the message went on.

Factory workers are forming detachments, some for defense of the city and some for the front, to fill in the ranks of the Red army.

The Express said the Soviet government still is carrying on in Moscow, in spite of the reported evacuation of the diplomatic corps to Kazan.

Although the Russians are preparing for a last-ditch defense of Moscow, the Express added, they are making ready also to apply the Soviet's "scorched earth" policy to the capital, and are planning a fresh stand in the east.

Thousands of civilians are building a deep new series of defense lines, the dispatch said. The first is 30 miles east of Moscow, while deeper and stronger lines are being formed based on the River Volga.

Rye and wheat production was made obligatory and oats and barley strictly controlled.

He has appointed a special commissar for supervising livestock economy after farmers failed to produce sufficient butter and meat cattle.

Special economic sections of the German criminal police departments in Prague and Brunn have been proceeding mercilessly against food hoarders and profiteers. Morgenthau said it would be cheaper and simpler to have only one kind of government security than to have several kinds as at present, particularly in view of the huge borrowing to finance the defense program.

Morgenthau conceded that the plan would hasten the day when the Treasury will reach its present $65,000,000 debt limit and will have to ask congress for an increase. The debts of the various agencies do not count toward the debt limit. For instance, the latest Treasury statements show that the Treasury owes $51,554,945.436 which counts toward the debt limit, and other agencies owe $6,928,941,005, which does not count toward the debt limit.

Hull Raps Hint U. S. 'Inspired' Panama Coup

Secretary Is 'Profoundly Shocked' by 'Wilful' Misrepresentation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Secretary Hull struck sharply today at suggestions that the recent coup d'etat in Panama was inspired by the United States. He said this government had "no connection, direct or indirect," with the move that ousted Arnulfo Arias from the presidency.

Arias was removed and Ricardo Adolfo De LaGuardia elected president of Panama a few days after Arias had prohibited the arming of ships flying the Panamanian flag.

In condemning what he characterized as an attempt to "make political capital" out of the upset in the Central American republic, Hull referred particularly to an article appearing in a Washington newspaper today under the heading, "Probes Sought of U. S. Part in Coup That Ousted Arias."

He said he was "profoundly shocked by the glaring inaccuracies and wilful misrepresentations" of the article, and asserted it was "deplorable that untrue statements of this character should appear in print, particularly when they are of a character to undermine the national reputation and give aid and comfort to forces inimical to the United States."

Two Fugitives Are Recaptured

Two of the six prisoners who escaped from the Fulton Tower Wednesday night were recaptured yesterday and a posse under Jailor Bud Foster expected to retake another pair early this morning.

The fugitives captured were Max McLennan, who was serving a six-year sentence, and W. A. Lewis, serving a burglary sentence. McLennan was caught at the home of friends on Piedmont avenue.

The six escaped by pushing through the corroded sheet iron roof of a shower bath, sawing a one-inch iron bar, lowering themselves to the courtyard with a rope made of blankets and clambering over an 18-foot wall.

Station Lieutenant Harry Maddox secured permission from Chief M. A. Hornsby to break the rule against allowing animals in cells.

Confusion, Disunity Caused Allied Rout, Viscount Gort Says

(This is the first of three articles by W. W. Chaplin, INS war correspondent who was attached to the British expeditionary force on the western front during 1939-40, highlighting the official military dispatches of Viscount Gort, commander in chief of the BEF, which have just been made public for the first time and which cast new light on the debacle of the Allies on the western front.)

By W. W. CHAPLIN.

The British war office opened its secret files today to disclose for the first time the lessons learned from defeat of the British expeditionary force in France—lessons which probably form the basis of any plans for future British invasion of the continent.

Publication was at last permitted of the official military dispatches of Viscount Gort, commander in chief of the ill-fated BEF of 1939-40, in which Gort tells in his own words the inside story of Britain's failure to halt the Nazi blitzkrieg on the western front, and the conclusions reached therefrom as to any new attempt to challenge the Nazis on land.

Disclosure of these documents serves as an answer to widespread puzzlement as to Britain's reasons for not launching an invasion of the Continent before now. By making them public, the war office apparently gives notice that it is not going to make the same mistake twice, and will postpone any invasion attempt until a new BEF has mechanized equipment and aerial support sufficient to give it at least an equal chance of victory.

Insufficient Equipment. In his military dispatches made public simultaneously in London and in the United States, Viscount Gort discloses his firm belief that contributing factors to the BEF's defeat were insufficient mechanized equipment and supplies, plus disastrous lack of Allied military staff co-operation which caused confusion and disunity.

Acknowledging for the first time that the BEF was forced to face five German armored divisions with only a handful of light tanks, mostly armed with only one machinegun; that ammunition dwindled close to the vanishing point; and that the 250,000 soldiers of the BEF had to be placed on half rations of food just when they needed strength the most, Gort wrote in his conclusions:

"These instances, among many others which might be quoted, serve to indicate the vital necessity for an expeditionary force, if it is to be used in a first-class war, being equipped on a scale commensurate with the task it is to be called upon to fulfill."

During the months I was attached to the BEF in France as an American war correspondent I saw countless instances of the poor equipment of which Lord Gort now speaks officially for the first time. What passed for tanks in the BEF were really only lightly armored scout cars, with open turrets unprotected against dive bombers and, with no armament to fit them for mechanized combat.

Few Planes on Hand.

I also saw evidence on every hand of Britain's numerical inferiority in the air. The British aviation equipment in France consisted largely of obsolete observation planes and a few Hurricane fighters. Bombers of all types and the superior Spitfire fighters were held in England because there were not enough for both offense abroad and defense at home.

Gort now discloses in his official papers that shortly after the German break-through, even such air equipment as had been in France was moved back to bases in England to save it from destruction. Thereafter the planes of the RAF were forced to operate from bases across the channel, answering as quickly as they could the frequent calls for support from the British land army in France. Viscount Gort, who in the Allied war plan was subordinate to French officers, upon whom he had to depend for both information and orders, disclosed that in addition to insufficient equipment the BEF was hamstrung by official confusion, lack of co-ordination and even apparent unwillingness to co-operate on the part of French commanders.

In the official dispatches which were made public simultaneously in London and in the United States, Gort reported that such confusion and lack of centralized control existed that General Weygand had ordered an Allied counterattack in Belgium on the very day that evacuation of the BEF from Dunkirk began—apparently oblivious of the fact that the British troops were being withdrawn.

French "Too Tired." Gort said he learned of the Belgian decision to capitulate, which left a 20-mile gap in his defenses, only one hour before the Belgian army actually laid down its arms. And when he called for joint action by the French first army, which he considered vital, he reported, he was told the men were "too tired."

With approval of the British government, General Gort decided on the evacuation from Dunkirk on May 26, 1940. This decision was reported the following morning at a meeting attended by General Koeltz, representing General Weygand, and General Prioux, commander of the first French army. Of that meeting Gort wrote:

"The principal business was the issue of the day by General Weygand. This enjoined a resolute attitude on the part of every leader, and the counteroffensive wherever possible."

Urges Counterattack. Gort said General Koeltz then urged two French generals present to attempt the recapture of Calais, though they knew the British were evacuating and the Belgian army was believed close to collapse.

"Though at the time they had nothing available save the 68th division and the regional troops, they did not demur," Gort said. "However, so far as I am aware, no action was ever taken in this respect."

It was that evening that General Koeltz asked General Gort at 11 o'clock whether he had heard that the King of the Belgians had asked for an armistice to begin at midnight.

"This was the first intimation I had heard of his intention," reported the chief of the British army. "Although I had already formed the opinion that the Belgian army was now incapable of offering serious or prolonged resistance to the enemy."

Faced With Open Gap. "I now found myself suddenly faced with an open gap between Ypres and the sea through which enemy armored forces might reach the beaches."

The following morning General Gort told General Blanchard, in charge of the northeastern Allied armies, that the only remaining choice was between evacuation or surrender. He requested co-operation of the French first army in a joint evacuation movement.

"While this discussion was taking place," Gort reported in his dispatches, "a liaison officer arrived from General Prioux, now in command of the French first army, to say that the latter did not consider his troops were fit to make any further move and that he therefore intended to remain in the area between Bethune and Lille."

"I then begged General Blanchard, for the sake of France, the French army and the Allied cause, to order General Prioux back. Surely, I said, his troops were not all so tired as to be incapable of moving. The French government would be able to provide ships at least for some of his troops, and the chance of saving a part of his trained soldiers was preferable to the certainty of losing them all. I could not move him."

Insurance Men Hear Address By Rothaermel

Increase in Applications Has Resulted From Crisis, He Says.

A threefold increase in life insurance applications have come from persons engaged in the military and naval service since the beginning of the crisis, W. M. Rothaermel, vice president in charge of agencies of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company, told the Atlanta Life Underwriters' Association yesterday.

For a long time more than half the buyers were past 30, but the trend shows the average age now is becoming lower. Rothaermel said, explaining that this was possibly due to the draft and the uncertainty of world conditions.

Three fundamentals of successful salesmanship were outlined by Mr. Rothaermel before more than 100 insurance men. They were, he said, proper work habits, proper prospecting and proper sales procedure. He elaborated on each of these points.

Mr. Rothaermel said one-fourth of buyers were women and another one-fourth were single men. The luncheon was presided over by W. Stanton Hale, president of the Atlanta Life Underwriters' Association.

Robinson Named To Marketing Post

Jimmy Robinson, president of the Georgia Association of Petroleum Retailers, Inc., yesterday was named to the southeastern subcommittee on marketing by Petroleum Co-ordinator Harold L. Ickes.

Robinson asked the co-operation of the public in the support of the Ickes request that service stations operate only from 7 o'clock in the morning to 7 at night. He pointed out the request is still in effect despite reports there is no shortage.

"It's not up to dealers to determine whether a shortage exists; it is our duty as true Americans to comply with any request made by our government when our freedom and security are at stake," said Robinson, who is the only retailer on the committee.

ceived no orders concerning evacuation, Gort reported, but the French soldiers assumed that they would be taken off with their Allies and evacuated to the beaches.

"Difficulties might have occurred at any time," he reported. "I urged the war office to obtain a decision as to the French policy for embarkation and asked that the French should take their full share in providing naval facilities."

The war office was apparently unable to obtain any information from the French government, however, and Gort took the matter into his own hands, turning over two British vessels for evacuation of French soldiers and giving them one of the three evacuation beaches.

After the first day's 60-mile drive into Belgium by the BEF and French forces, a retreat was made necessary by the German break-through at Sedan, which threatened to cut the Allied armies off from their supplies. A 30-mile withdrawal was made, the BEF being assigned positions along the Escalut, which had been used to inundate surrounding country as a tank defense.

Water Became Low. "Soon after arrival, however," Gort says in his dispatches, "the level of the water became dangerously low, at places less than three feet deep. It looked therefore, as if, apart from the unusually dry weather, some of the sluices in the neighborhood of Valenciennes had been closed in order to produce inundations in the low lying ground in that area, even if at the expense of the water on the front of the BEF."

The Valenciennes sector was occupied by the French troops assigned to co-operate with the BEF.

General Gort said that Belgium presented a serious problem from the moment the BEF landed in France. Because of the neutrality policy to which he said it was "wedded," Belgium refused to give any military information on which the Allies might plan their action in case Germany invaded Belgium.

Lord Gort says in his dispatches: "The French authorities were never in a position to obtain reliable and accurate details of the plans of the Belgian general staff."

Assigned Two Roads. When Belgium was invaded and called for help two roads were assigned the BEF by Belgian officials, one running on either side of Brussels.

"A series of requests was, however received," Gort says, "to discontinue the use of these roads on the ground that Brussels had been declared an open town and that British troop movements would prejudice its safety. But no adequate alternative routes were available and I was therefore compelled to adhere to the original plan of using the outskirts of the city."

The refugee problem was now becoming acute and further complicated because despite Gort's requests the Belgian authorities had done nothing to restrict use of private autos or sale of gasoline.

When the BEF arrived at the position assigned to it, Belgian troops were occupying it, Gort said, and made no move to make room. This was reported as merely one of many instances in which failure to co-ordinate the Allied plans caused confusion, inefficiency, and impossibility of any concerted action against the mutual enemy.

(Next: Mr. Chaplin reveals Viscount Gort's official comments on the BEF's lack of sufficient mechanized equipment.)

It still is a beautiful picture as presented at Loew's Grand with Jeannette MacDonald, Brian Aherne and Gene Raymond—with that fine actor, Ian Hunter, in a minor part.

Nobody could quite kill "Smilin' Through," though Gene Raymond, who is twice as wooden as Charley McCarthy could ever be, does his best.

Some plays are called "convincing." But how any girl could love Raymond in desperation is anything but that. Still, Miss MacDonald married him, I am told. Maybe he's handy around the house.

Miss MacDonald is even lovelier than ever in technicolor, but I wish she had been given a chance to sing more and act less. She is an excellent singer. The producers didn't spend much on music royalties. The theme songs are the ever-beautiful "Smilin' Through," the dear old "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," and that stirring march, "Hope and Glory," which Miss MacDonald gives the works. And does she! It almost lifts you off your seat. Say what you will, that girl can sing!

Aherne gives a finished performance. The technician is beautifully done. The settings are fine. But the only thing I really liked about the picture was the old stuff—the wedding of Mooneyan, the murder at the altar, the visions, in which she appears to her lover of a "Generation ago. Much of the rest is honey.

And yet there were many moments when I found tears in my eyes. It's a grand old piece of sentiment and I don't hesitate to recommend it to the women—who do enjoy a good cry.

My reactions and those of the big audience were sometimes in disagreement. The crowd gave a big hand to bits I thought were worse than terrible. I'm thinking of the comedians. Comedians in a girl show are a necessary—or perhaps unnecessary—evil. But they do give the girls a chance to change gee-strings and other fragments of costumes.

On the whole, I think it's a mighty good show—at the price. The stage end of it runs an hour and 10 minutes and is worth anybody's money.

The girls—and there are a lot of them—are slender and graceful. Some of them are terrifically good looking. Some are not. But they put on a number of numbers, all attractive. There's a pair of acrobatic dancers who are better than good. And if the comedy gags date back to the Spanish War days—what do you expect for 55 cents top?

The picture is "Henry Aldrich for President." Adapted from that series of radio plays tossed by Ezra Stone. Jimmy Lydon plays Henry Aldrich. It's a most delightful picture for folk who have followed the Aldrich family on the radio.

SONJA HENIE, MILLER FEATURED AT FOX

A smiling, lovable Sonja Henie, at her cinematic best since her first appearance on the screen, and the soothing-to-pleasure music of ace bandman Glenn Miller make the new 20th Century Fox musical, "Sun Valley Serenade," a sprightly tempoed, lightly entertaining movie. It opened yesterday at the Fox.

Glenn Miller and his music—which is excellent—is the drawing card for this film, though Sonja and John Payne get higher billing. If the title, "Sun Valley Serenade," sounds a bit poky, don't be fooled. Nor let those recently past fops of Miss Henie influence you away from the current bit of entertainment.

The picture has a nice tempo—a melody that pulls its audience in happy mood. And little Sonja Henie is a dream again—skating the most part, with a couple of skating scenes thrown in. Happily she leaves most of the singing to Miss Lynn Bari.

Spectacular and exciting are the ski scenes taken at Sun Valley. Comedy mixes in also when Milton Berle tries his feet on the slick sticks. Most emphasis is placed on the ski track, rather than Miss Henie's usual skating. It is the skating finale of "Sun Valley Serenade"—the customary elaborate waltz on ice theme—that dulls the later part of an otherwise entertaining musical.

The story is inconsequential. Payne, a piano player in Miller's band, adopts a Norwegian refugee as a publicity stunt arranged by Berle. That the refugee baby turns out to be above the 16-year variety, complicating Payne's romance with Miss Bari, furnishes the plot complication.

Reviewers Like New Pictures Showing Here

Some Held Over; Stage Performance Wins Praise.

By DUDLEY GLASS.

Several new pictures in town and several are good enough to hold over.

I couldn't catch "Sun Valley Serenade," at the Fox, but Lee Rogers, who did, liked it. See his review.

I had tears in my eyes over "Smilin' Through," at Loew's Grand, though the producers put a lot of stuff into this new version which might well have been left on the clipping-room floor. Still, it's a honey of a picture.

The Roxy has opened with a picture and a stage show—one of the Marcus shows. By no means bad. See review below.

"Honky Tonk," with Gable, is at the Rhodes. "Hold Back the Dawn" has moved downtown to the Paramount.

"SMILIN' THROUGH" LOVELY, BUT TOO MUCH STREAMLINED

"Smilin' Through" is a beautiful drama when Jane Cowl played Mooneyan and her lovely niece, Kathleen. It was a beautiful picture when Norma Talmadge presented the dual role in the old silent days.

It still is a beautiful picture as presented at Loew's Grand with Jeannette MacDonald, Brian Aherne and Gene Raymond—with that fine actor, Ian Hunter, in a minor part.

Buddy Fisher Has Novel Slant On Orchestras

Maestro, Boys Win Good Will of Customers by Answering Requests.

By LEE ROGERS.

Buddy Fisher and his boys have a novel slant on the band business.

And they are doing a pretty swell job of making a theory work. As any one who has been to the Rainbow Roof for a bit of entertainment, refreshment and food this week knows.

Buddy—with 20-odd years in the business behind him—believes that the orchestra cash customers talk about the next morning despite headaches and all, are the bands which make the customers have a good time regardless of the esthetic and technical qualities of their music.

"Nobody—well hardly anybody—remembers the next morning who the great clarinetist was, but they all will remember if Buddy Fisher's band made them have a good time," said the Rainbow Roof's music master.

I stopped playing clarinet with the band eight years ago and ever since have devoted my time to trying to make the customers have a good time. For if they do, we can count on them coming back again. And that is important, because we can play more than 50 requests at a moment's notice.

"When we get a request not in the library, we make it a point to get an arrangement by the next night. The next time we see Mr. Request come in, we just announce playing the next number for him."

"He thinks he's a big shot and we have a friend for life," Buddy said.

The Fisher band, in addition to furnishing good music with a 13-piece aggregation, capers about quite frequently on the floor with everything from hillbilly enterprisers to jitterbug cut cutting. They even have been seen to leave the band stand in a body and serenade a couple on the floor, or at the table.

Featured singer is blond and vivacious Gypsy Edwards, the girl with the expressive face and the gypsy striped dresses. The band's specialization is an opportunity, on a patriotic number written by Buddy—"The Land We Love," written seven months ago.

Atlanta Historical Bulletin Released

Atlanta publications during the War Between the States comprise the bulk of the recent edition of the Atlanta Historical Bulletin, which was released yesterday.

A review on the old publications is presented by Richard Barksdale Harwell, whose article reveals many interesting publications, and tells where these publications now can be seen in museums and libraries.

In addition to the publication review, articles were contributed to the issue by Lydia Lycett, Thomas K. Glenn, Croom Partridge and Ruth Blair, executive secretary of the society.

PILOTS BUY BONDS—The Atlanta Pilot Club yesterday became a share holder in the United States when Miss Bertie Hale, assistant cashier of the Morris Plan Bank, left, and Mrs. Readie P. Ashurst, right, purchased a $100 bond from Marion Allen, in charge of the sales of defense bonds in Georgia.

Wide Variety Mexican Leader Is Booked for Demands Split Paradise Room With Germany

Fall, Winter Entertainment Lists Many Popular Offerings.

Juddie Johnson, manager of the Paradise room of the Henry Grady hotel, yesterday announced a pretentious list of fall and winter entertainments for patrons of the popular dining spot. Some of the best-known talent in the country is listed in the new bookings.

Beginning next Thursday and running for two weeks will be Leota Lane, sister of Rosemary, Friscilla and Leona Lane, who has been popular in pictures, radio, musical and comedy for several seasons.

Goldie, accompanied by his famous trumpet and orchestra, will take over November 8 and extend his engagement until December 5. He was with Paul Whiteman for a dozen years and established a reputation as a comedian and with his trumpet solos. The band is outstanding offering what is generally conceded to be smooth music and many novelties.

Korn Kobbler.

The famous Korn Kobbler, billed as America's most unseemly band, will begin an engagement on December 8, running through December 18. The Korn Kobbler are known widely for their work at the Ballentine Pavilion at the World's Fair, and have been daily on a nationally known radio program for the past year. The band also appeared at the Flagship, across the Hudson river from New York in New Jersey. It broke all records in Atlanta when it appeared here about 18 months ago.

From December 19 to January 15 Danny Becker's troupe, containing nine men, three girls and a boy, will offer outstanding entertainment. Becker and his boys and girls are now playing at the Trocadero, and will bring their full show "within the band" to Atlanta.

Shuffle Music Returns.

On January 16 and extending to February 14, Eddie Camden will bring the NBC shuffle music back to the Paradise for the third time. He formerly was first trumpet with Don Bestor, and Ten Men and a Girl. His tag line is "Step Up, Let's Shuffle."

Opening February 15 and running for another two weeks will be Charlie Strong and his orchestra, a favorite in New York and Boston for danceable music, a splendid trio of vocalists and diversified entertainment.

Johnson said he has options on Gus Van Winkle, Three Heat Waves, Estelle Taylor, Lupe Molina and Helen (Betty Boop) Kane, and will announce other engagements as they are booked.

Aviation Cadet Killed

When Plane Crashes

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 16. (AP)—Aviation Cadet John P. Vinyard, 24, of Turkey, Texas, was killed when his training plane crashed today about 28 miles southwest of Jacksonville Naval Air station.

A station spokesman said the tail of his plane was nicked in a slight collision with another craft while he was flying in a three-plane formation. The ship went into a shallow dive and then got out of control at about 500 feet altitude. Vinyard's body was found 100 feet from the plane, his parachute partly opened.

Kline, Jenkins Head Fulton's Sale of Bonds

Newly Named Leaders Map Drive To Sell Defense Securities.

William K. Jenkins, prominent theater executive, and Raymond Kline, department store official, will direct the Fulton county committee for sale of defense bonds and stamps, Mayor LeCraw, honorary chairman, announced yesterday.

Following acceptance of the position of chairman by Jenkins and vice chairman by Kline, the new officers held an informal conference in LeCraw's office and laid preliminary plans for the drive, which will begin about December 1.

Newspapers, radios, theaters and churches will be asked to cooperate in the campaign to raise defense funds and to keep Atlanta and Fulton county in the fore of other cities of comparable wealth and population, Jenkins said.

A speakers' bureau will be formed much along the same plan used in the first World War in the sale of Liberty Bonds. School children will be given an opportunity to purchase stamps and when a folder has been filled with $18.75 worth of the stamps, they can be exchanged for a $25 bond, which matures in 10 years.

WHOLE WHEAT DIET FOR HEALTH OF STATE

Editor, Constitution: Congratulations on your article in Wednesday's paper on nutrition. It should be read and studied by the Governor of Georgia and all the members of the state legislature, because nutrition is the first defense line in life, in peace and in war. Then, perhaps, something could be done which would enable the State Board of Health and the food and drug department of the state to extend the same protection to the children that is now enjoyed by the pigs and colts.

The exhibits of stock at the State Fair every year are proof of our success in raising pigs and colts; the number of draft horses rejected for military service is proof of our failure in raising children.

The first thing first is the mother's milk, which is more or less saturated with nicotine from tobacco, caffeine from coffee and bottle drinks which are colored by coal tar products. All three of these substances are classified by the president of the World Surgical Congress as highly carcinogenic or cancer-producing substances.

The first bread we feed the child is as white as snow and is almost pure starch; because from 80 to 90 per cent of the elements which make bone, blood, brain, skin, teeth and nails and eyesight, with over 30 per cent of the protein, has been removed. Of course, the child is naturally the color of the biscuit.

As soon as the child can walk to the cold drink stand and they sell coal tar drinks and cigarettes he follows in the steps of his parents. On account of the absence of the essential elements in the food, the teeth, nasal passages, eyesight and intestinal tract require the constant care of a dozen specialists, a trained nurse with 40 kinds of mineral oil to keep the child in health.

The suggestion of your dietitian that each and every child they have, rural electric lines should combine and erect a mill at a cost of about $20, which would grind whole wheat flour, is the first step in the direction of permanently improving the health of the people we have seen published in a daily newspaper. However, it fails to take care of the thousands which are not now, nor ever will, be on an electric line. We saw this problem 30 years ago. An old style coffee mill will do in an emergency, but a hand-powered feed mill for grinding chicken feed is the best.

For $3 or $4 you can buy one which will last over 30 years. How much longer we do not know because our mill looks as good as new after 30 years' service.

Of the 23 chemical elements which make up the animal we call man, 18 of them are found in the wheat grain and the remainder are found in raw vegetables and pot (liquor) licker. With these three foods whole wheat bread, pot-licker and raw vegetables you will thrive, my boy, and some day you will be a better man than your daddy.

Whole wheat carries such a high per cent of protein that the flour readily decomposes, bugs and worms get into it. For that reason, grind only a week's supply at a time and keep the flour can closed. Do not grind it too fine. Serve like oat meal, steam it or cook it but remember the most important of all—eat some of it raw; because the protein in raw wheat is more readily digested in the raw state than when cooked. From one to two table-spoonfuls of raw wheat flour mixed with milk or other cooked cereal is nature's regulator of intestinal action. Put all the mineral oil you have in your crank case. It is better for an auto than it is for a man.

Who knows but what you are called to the kingdom at such a time as this, to check the mounting death rate from cancer and heart failure and increase the joys of life and lengthen life itself? Like Abou Ben Adhem, may your tribe increase.

NEAL KITCHENS, Warm Springs.

SEES NO GREAT SIN IN TAILMADGE ACTS

Editor, Constitution: Personally, I know neither ex-Governor Rivers nor present Governor Talmadge. But I do know that Mr. Rivers, being a Roosevelt sympathizer, was not criticized by the majority of southern newspapers when he released numerous criminals who are now preying on society. His governorship was an extravagant failure.

So far as Mr. Talmadge is concerned, I cannot see any great sin, political or otherwise, that he has committed since assuming office. The fact is, Georgia is a Roosevelt state; the people are prejudiced or dominated by their views. They are no longer even southern in sentiment. I refer you to an editorial in the last Collier which presumes to meddle in our affairs. How do you like it—this outside interference?

L. W. CARTER, Dalton, Ga.

GERMAN POWER MUST BE ERADICATED

Editor, Constitution: I have tried hard to forget an article appearing in your paper September 28 by your Mr. Robert Quillen titled, "If the Steam Pressure Keeps Increasing, It Must Sometime Find Relief."

After asking "What, then can the world hope for when the present war is over—assuming that Germany is defeated?" This is a very vital question but it should have read when Germany is defeated.

I take exception to the following excerpts from Mr. Quillen's article: "Divide Germany into helpless little states? They will inevitably unite and lust for revenge."

"Scatter or exterminate them? The world is too decent to consider such a solution."

Mr. Quillen closes by saying: "Apparently the world must fight for its freedom in every generation or submit to German domination."

Divided into helpless little states they will not inevitably unite if they are rigorously policed by properly selected and hard-boiled representatives of a coalition of world powers. They could and should be utterly smashed at the very beginning of any attempt to unite or arm, as you would stamp out with your feet an incipient blaze that, if let alone, would become a conflagration. And, too, this should be continued until all idea of world domination is eradicated—if it takes a thousand years.

Mr. Quillen admits that "Apparently the world must fight for its freedom in every generation or submit to German domination," but thinks the world is too "de-

Always talk in the newspaper about better and wider highways. Four-lane highways. They're coming, gradually.

But you hear little about highways for the pedestrians. Sidewalks on highways.

Oh, yes, there are walkers on highways and not all of them trying to thumb a ride. Illinois statistics show that pedestrians on highways accounted last year for 45 out of 100 deaths in traffic accidents.

If a state can afford to build a 40-foot highway for cars it should be able to build a four-foot walk for pedestrians. Especially as a sidewalk doesn't require the heavy and costly construction necessary for bearing trucks. Even a cinder path would serve.

They are especially needed on bridges—the long and narrow bridges which give cars barely room to pass—and where a pedestrian must squeeze himself against the rail to avoid fenders.

Accepted rule: there is no law—that pedestrians should walk "against" traffic. That is, on the left of the road. They can see approaching cars better—and can step off into the mud if they must, side you choose.

But walking on the highway, at night, is perilous, no matter which side you choose.

No motorist wants to hit a pedestrian—or a dog or a pig or anything. Many of them have wrecked their cars and killed themselves to avoid that.

But the driver can't always see. Approaching headlights blind him. He comes out of the glare to see somebody—probably in dark clothes, 20 feet ahead of him. What's he going to do? Ditch on his right, line of speeding cars on his left? He's not exceeding the speed limit. He can't swerve left very far. Only thing is the ditch.

Certainly, pedestrians have a right to use the highway. They're taxpayers, too. But they're entitled to protection. The day is coming when sidewalks along the highways will be a matter of course—figured in on the contract.

Wanted—Witnesses
Number of poor and ignorant defendants, lawyers admit, are sent to the penitentiary—or may be to the chair—for lack of adequate defense. They can't afford to engage a real lawyer. Maybe they must depend upon a youngster appointed by the court—who knows little and cares less.

A paid advertisement in the Dodge County Advertiser—and perhaps in other papers—by a lawyer. I'm sure the attorney won't mind my quoting it:
"EDDIE LEE SPIVEY
"Any person knowing any truth that will help in this Negro's defense is requested, in the interest of justice, to communicate with the undersigned, at his attorney, giving your name and address."
"Righteousness exalteth a nation." Let us find the truth, act on it and do justice to all."
"D. LEE CHURCHWELL, Attorney
"Washington Block Macon, Ga."

Pastors Plan Charity Appeal From Pulpits

Sermons Will Precede Annual Community Fund Campaign.

With the zero hour for the launching of Atlanta's nineteenth annual Community Fund appeal set for Monday morning, many churches throughout Fulton and DeKalb county will recognize the civic effort in behalf of local humanitarian work in their services Sunday.

Following a custom of many years standing the theme of neighborly helpfulness as reflected by the work of the 34 outstanding charitable agencies dependent upon the fund, will be the keynote of sermons and programs in Sunday school and Bible classes.

"Community Fund Sunday" is expected to add substantial impetus to the $575,000 campaign which is already being presented by scores of addresses before civic and community groups, radio programs, the press, window posters, billboards and the personal pleas of hundreds of volunteer workers.

All divisions of the army of solicitors are now virtually complete, according to R. H. Rich, general chairman of the 1941 appeal, and everything is in readiness for the "early bird" breakfast which will marshal the campaign forces at 8:30 Monday morning at the Ansley hotel just prior to taking the field.

A three-way radio program by Atlanta stations presenting leaders of the appeal will announce the opening of the drive Monday afternoon.

DeKalb Convict Guard To Be Tried in Slaying

Roy Rice, DeKalb county convict guard indicted in the slaying of a Negro convict guard, Levester Broughton, in a row over a delay in serving supper at the county camp, will be tried during a special term of DeKalb superior court beginning Monday.

Rice's case is scheduled for the second week, when criminal cases will be tried. Civil cases are on the calendar for next week, and Judge James C. Davis will preside over the entire session. Most of the criminal trials will be routine liquor and burglary cases, officials said.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

INTERESTING CONVENTIONS. means to discourage the use and traffic in the same." We need the emphasis which the W. C. T. U. is constantly giving to the evils of the liquor traffic. I am happy to know that the organization is steadily growing in this state and throughout the nation. And we may well give thanks for the leadership of such women as Mrs. Mary Harris Armour, Mrs. T. E. Patterson, Mrs. Marvin Williams, Mrs. Mary Scott Russell, and others.

I wouldn't have missed seeing the Confederate Veterans for anything. It is one grand sight to see them at any time, and especially when they come together in these annual reunions. They laugh and they cry, and they make you laugh and cry.

There are only 51 Confederate Veterans left in all of Georgia. There are only five in the Confederate home here in Atlanta. There were five veterans at the reunion from Georgia in addition to the five at the home, and there were 10 from outside of Georgia, making a total of 20 in all. You have, no doubt, seen the pictures of them in the newspapers.

Governor Talmadge, in his address to the veterans Monday morning, said: "I am glad that you have resolved to hold these reunions as long as there are two of you who can attend. And I am grateful that these good women are continuing to give their best thought and time to the perpetuation of the reunion and to every possible expression of appreciation of your great and heroic service."

We honor ourselves when we honor these grand old men. Let us see to it that they have every comfort, and that they are fully assured, at all times, of our love and appreciation.

Absence from the city prevented me from attending the W. C. T. U. convention, but I have kept up with their proceedings through the press and radio. The W. C. T. U. is only officered by cherished leaders of our Georgia Christian womanhood, and their annual programs are worthy of everyone's consideration. They work intelligently and unceasingly at the job of teaching the evils of intemperance. And they are making steady and sustained progress.

The pledge of the W. C. T. U., written by Frances Willard, and adopted by the organization in 1874, follows:

"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine, beer and cider, and to employ all proper

Dismissal of Employee At Augusta Is Upheld

The dismissal by the city of Augusta of Charles A. Thompson, a meter reader in the water works department, was upheld yesterday by the state supreme court.

Claiming his layoff in March, 1939, was a violation of the city's permanent tenure law, Thompson brought mandamus action to force his reinstatement and sued for $1,500 plus interest in salary and $100 a month additional until the case was adjudicated.

The city demurred to the petition and maintained that the tenure act did not require the filing of charges against an employee until after his suspension and then only if he made a written demand within 10 days.

The justices, in a unanimous decision, said Thompson gave the city's lack of funds as the reason for his dismissal and the court added that this did not state a cause of action.

McGill Column 'Advice' Echoes In Negro Trial

Heavier Sentences Being Given by Juries, Records Show.

By WILLARD COPE.

As a repercussion of Ralph McGill's recent column insisting upon stiffer penalties in Negro murder cases, the defense in a slaying trial yesterday required full and formal arraignment, an ancient and colorful proceeding which quickly brought a crowd of lawyers and officials to Superior Judge Walter C. Hendrix's courtroom.

Asserting that the publication was causing juries to view such charges more seriously, Wilbur Nall, attorney for John W. (Bud) Leonard, Negro on trial, sought from the judge inclusion of an additional question, put to each juror, as to whether he had been influenced by the news and editorial articles. This was not permitted.

Records showed that where formerly sentences of one to two years have been the usual penalties, juries in the past few days have been much more severe. In three murder cases tried this week the sentences were, respectively, 11 years, 20 years and life.

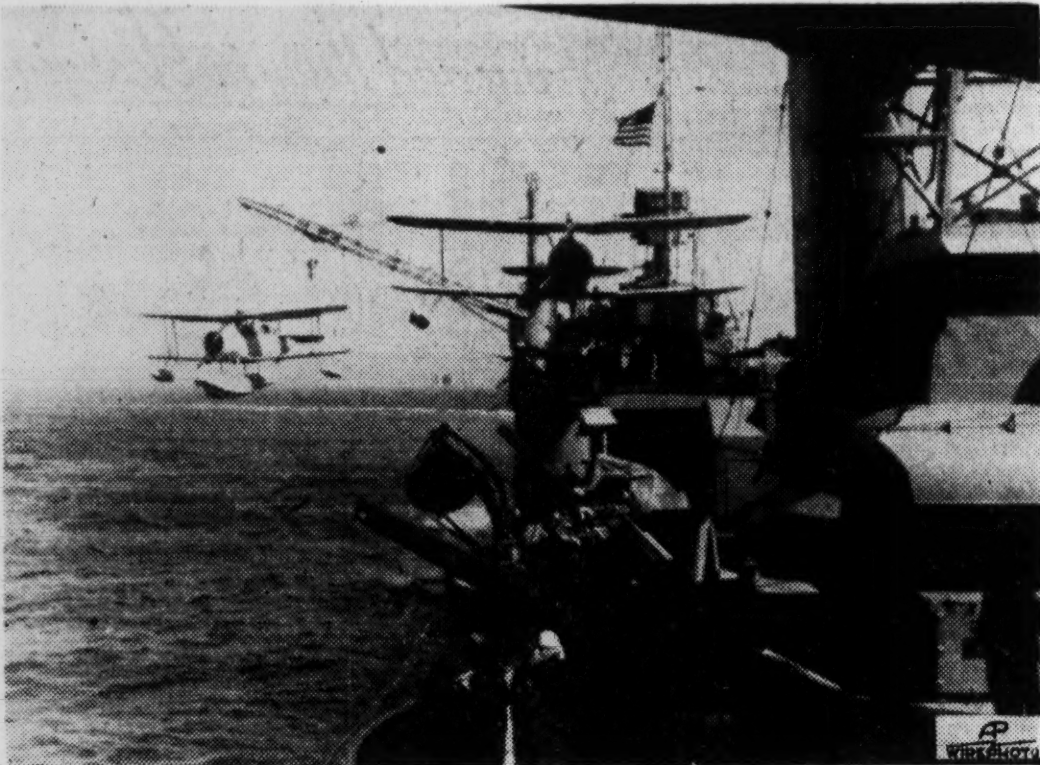

Already, according to Detective C. L. Taylor, of the homicide

YOU MAY ALWAYS BE CONSTIPATED UNLESS—

You correct faulty living habits—unless liver bile flows freely every day into your intestines to help digest fatty foods and guard against constipation.

SO USE COMMON SENSE! Drink more water, eat more fruit and vegetables. And if assistance is needed, take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. They not only assure gentle yet thorough bowel movements but ALSO stir up your liver bile secretion to help digest fatty foods.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderfully used successfully for over 20 years by Dr. F. M. Edwards in treating patients for constipation and sluggish liver bile, today Olive Tablets are justly FIRST choice of thousands of grateful users. Test their goodness TONIGHT! 15¢, 50¢, 90¢. All druggists.

COMES HOME TO ROOST—After patrolling a section of the Atlantic for possible submarines and surface raiders, a naval observation plane is hoisted aboard a U. S. cruiser en route to Iceland. Picture is an official Navy photograph released yesterday.

squad, who was in court as a witness against Leonard, the number of Negro stabbings has lessened. "The word has gone out," he declared, significantly, "it used to be said a Negro would rather face a Negro murder charge than be caught in the bug racket."

Unusual Procedure. Attorney William Schley Howard, an old hand in the formalities of court procedure, went back to general of the Stone Mountain circuit in order to conduct the formal arraignment. He was associated in the prosecution with Judge J. R. Farham, assistant solicitor general.

Four panels of prospective jurors were required to stand and submit en masse to questioning and visual examination by the defense. Afterward, each talesman was asked three statutory questions by Attorney Howard, who then, impressively, would announce either "competent" or "excused for cause." If the talesman proved competent, Howard then would intone the hoary formula:

"Prisoner, look upon the juror. Juror, look upon the prisoner."

Usually Omitted. Both prosecution and defense would go into separate huddles, and presently the talesman would be accepted or excused.

It was one of very few times the veteran "Judge" Charles Hartsfield and W. H. Spratlin, deputy court clerk, said that the long formality had been insisted on in superior court here. It is usually omitted in the interest of speed. Courts in more rural sections experience it more frequently.

Leonard is charged with stabbing to death a drinking companion, John Howard, in a Larkin street speakeasy August 29. The trial will be completed today.

Editorial Praise. Figures made public yesterday by Captain J. D. Ragsdale, of the County Identification Bureau, showed that in 58 Negro murder cases tried in the 12 months ending October 1 there were 16 not guilty verdicts, no death sentences, seven life sentences and 35 impositions of minor terms of imprisonment.

Defendants who received much more severe penalties this week were Ruby Williams, who was given a life sentence, Ollie B. James, 20 years, and Annie Lee Pressley, 11 years.

The "One Word More" column in The Constitution, written by Ralph McGill, calling for a more serious view of "Negro slayings," drew praise from the Fulton grand jury in a special presentation returned Tuesday.

'Clay Homes' Dedication to Be Held Tonight

Nathan Straus Will Deliver Principal Speech at Marietta.

With Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, delivering the main address, the "Clay Homes," Marietta's white housing project, will be dedicated formally at 8 o'clock tonight.

Straus and Colonel Lucius Clay, of Washington, a son of the late Senator A. S. Clay, for whom the housing project was named, will arrive in Marietta in time for a luncheon today at the Marietta Golf Club. Other guests at the luncheon will be Ryburn Clay, another son of the late senator, Steve Clay, a grandson of J. M. Robinson and James Therrell, of the Atlanta Housing Authority, representatives of housing authorities from other Georgia cities, the Marietta city council and members of the Marietta Housing Authority.

"Clay Homes" are located just off Atlanta street, and just a few blocks from the center of the city. The project has been under construction for more than a year. A Negro housing project is now under construction, but will not be completed for some time.

T. C. Branson Jr., chairman of the housing authority, and Mayor L. M. (Big) Blair, who worked diligently to obtain the two housing projects, will conduct a tour for the distinguished visitors through Marietta, showing them the new recreation center, consisting of an auditorium, a modern swimming pool and an athletic stadium.

The white housing project contains 132 units which immediately will be made available for occupants in the low-income bracket, while the Negro project will contain 120 units.

Marietta city officials are expecting a large number of visitors for the dedication services, and point out that the modern new four-lane highway is now open from Atlanta to Marietta, and the Atlanta visitors can save time in reaching Marietta by using the new route.

"PANEL HEATING" Engineers at the University of California now regard ordinary air conditioning as "old stuff." The problem they are seeking to solve is "panel heating" which would make it possible to leave the windows open all winter and still have a comfortable temperature.

Interesting Contacts Made Through Dinner Invitations

By SALLY FORTH.

• • • INTERESTING CONTACTS are being revealed through invitations issued every Sunday to naval cadets in training at the U. S. N. R. Aviation Base at Camp Gordon. And, relative to this subject, is the story revolving around Hugh Price Fellows. Not so many Sundays ago, Hugh was invited to dine with Mrs. Wilmer Dutton, chairman of the committee of the Young Matrons' Circle for Tallulah Falls School, to secure invitations for aviation cadets to take Sunday dinners in the homes of representative Atlantans.

Hugh hails from Florida, and the American stage boasts no young personality more colorful or more interesting. Shakespearean roles; Salome, the courtesan who danced for the head of John the Baptist; Calisti, the medieval goldsmith and lover-artist; and Wagner, the mad genius of music, are numbered among his interpretations which won fame and acclaim from audiences and newspaper commentators. While portraying these characters, the artist wore gorgeous costumes suitable for each role. His inflectional change in voice, expressive gestures, and dramatic ability gave audiences something long to be remembered.

Aside from his dramatic talent, the young aviator has attained prominence in other fields. He completed his college degrees in record time and was the youngest full-time professor in two colleges. Leading magazines gave him recognition for his ability as a designer, make-up artist and director, and for his poems and magazine articles that were published in magazines. He authored "Dark Needs No Candles," "Basic Principles of Speech," and "Slow Smoke."

In his "thank you note" to Mrs. Dutton, Hugh expressed the universal appreciation felt by all young aviators for invitations extended by Atlantans. He wrote:

"Just a note to tell you what a delightful evening you provided for the other men and me with your buffet supper Sunday evening. To be able to relax in a comfortable, homelike atmosphere after weeks of living in barracks was indeed a rare treat. And I'm sure that the special saint who looks after homeless young aviators will bless you for thinking of us kindly—if there is such a saint! People in Atlanta have been so generous and thoughtful and considerate to all of us that I shall always remember the city as being quite the most hospitable town I've encountered on the globe."

If you have a boy in the Army or the Navy, with troublesome problem to solve, ask the aid of the Red Cross. It is a liaison agency between the home and the military organizations of the United States.

• • • A HILARIOUS evening awaits those holding tickets for the opening performance of the musical revue, "Hooray America," this evening when members of the Decatur Junior League will sing in "sweet charity" at the Decatur auditorium.

A laugh-provoking number will be the Puritan scene in which actresses, attired in demure gray dresses suggestive of Plymouth Rock days, will surround Mickey (Mrs. Wilson) Mason as she tunelessly laments that they were born 300 years too soon to enjoy cocktails! The climax of the number will be a disarming scene, which leaves the actors wearing bizarre modern costumes, as they cluster around talented Dorothy (Mrs. Charles) Young, who will execute the intricate steps of a modern tap dance.

Ethelyn (Mrs. Charles) Taylor will star in a riotous number in which she whangs out a song about the girl who married the "man on the flying trapeze." She will be joined by her four sons—recruits from Camp Gordon Air Base—who will wear tight and sing throughout acrobatic numbers!

Jacqueline Howard will inspire her audience to chuckles when she gives an interpretation of America's first hillbilly, dressed as an Indian princess, and singing about Captain John Smith.

Emphasizing the theme of the show, Americanism, 20 naval airmen from Camp Gordon training station will lend their lusty voices to the singing of "Anchors Aweigh," wearing colorful blue and gold costumes.

Another and final performance of "Hooray America" will be given tomorrow evening, so buy your tickets for Saturday's show if a previous engagement keeps you away this evening. Remember Robert Bancroft, who has had much experience in staging "hits," is the director of the revue. And proceeds from your tickets will benefit the DeKalb Clinic and other worthwhile charities.

• • • ALWAYS on the alert for interesting cross-sections of life, representatives of Life magazine have found a particularly intriguing, and certainly unique, subject in the Rabun Gap-Nacoochee school, located at Rabun Gap, in the heart of the north Georgia mountains. William Sanders, of Life's staff, is coming down Saturday especially to "cover" the school and will spend three days there taking photographs.

The school is unique in that it affords an opportunity for entire families to have vocational training while the children are at school, as cottages, with surrounding acreage for farming, are available. Classes are offered from elementary grades to junior college, while economics classes train the parents for more profitable living in the mountain regions of north Georgia.

Each family must operate its land as a model farm and see that it yields its share of income. There are at present 15 large families, totaling 121 individuals, who occupy the circle of 1,400 acres around the central school farm. Lack of housing facilities has caused numerous others to be turned away.

The school is aided in its maintenance by funds raised by the members of the Rabun Gap-Nacoochee Senior Guild, the Rabun Gap-Nacoochee Club and the Junior Guild.

The Rabun Gap-Nacoochee Club sponsors an annual amateur horse show to raise money for the school. Always an outstanding ring event, this year's show is scheduled for 1:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at North Fulton Park. The event is open to all amateur riders, and this year has been planned on a larger and more spectacular scale than ever before.

• • • HALLOWEEN is one of those special occasions that simply must be celebrated in some manner. There's always an exhilaration in the very air that makes for restlessness unless folks are gathered together. Mayhap it's because the witches and the goblins are abroad and there's safety in numbers.

Too, Halloween is a night for real, old-fashioned fun, and that's the reason why Bessie Pope Hempstead has chosen that evening for the barbecue at which she will entertain the members of the Saddle and Sirloln Club, their husbands and wives.

The party will be held at 7 o'clock at Mrs. Hempstead's attractive cabana on Jackson Lake. Besides the barbecue, apple-bobbing and other customary Halloween games will be enjoyed by the guests, who will leave Atlanta at 5 o'clock. Last year the members of the Saddle and Sirloln Club motored in a body to Jackson Lake for a barbecue. They had such a grand time on that occasion that everyone clamored for a repetition. And now that it's in the offing, they are "champing at the bit" as they impatiently await the arrival of October 31.

Thomas-Bell. BELTON, S. C., Oct. 16.—The marriage of Miss Martha Lucile Thomas, of Honea Path, S. C., to Horace Monroe Bell, of Belton, S. C., formerly of Hartwell, Ga., was quietly performed recently at the home of the officiating minister, Rev. W. P. Hall, of Anderson, South Carolina.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore U. Hardeman were photographed leaving the Little Chapel of Glenn Memorial church, following their recent marriage. Mrs. Hardeman is the former Miss Marion Gilbert Respass, attractive young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Respass. Mr. and Mrs. Hardeman will reside on Fourteenth street after their return from a Florida honeymoon.

At the very first sniffle, sneeze, or any sign of a cold just try a few drops of Vicks Vapo-rinol up each nostril. If used in time, Vapo-rinol's quick action helps prevent many colds from developing. And remember this, when a head cold makes you miserable, or transient congestion "fills up" nose and spoils sleep—3-purposes Vapo-rinol does three important things. Gotham Is Curious

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 16.—One cannot stoop over to tie a shoe lace without drawing a crowd on Broadway or thereabouts.

And if one isn't careful to do the job in a hurry some smart promoter is apt to install a turnstile before you can straighten up.

Excavations go over big. I don't know what it is that fascinates people so about such things, but it is true also that anyone can stand and look up at a tall building briefly and stop pedestrian traffic.

The point is that Frankie Sinkwich is coming east to play Columbia, broken jaw and all, and the stories in the papers have sent New York's curious into a dither or rather, so to speak.

Every day there has been something about Fireball Sinkwich. They have called him everything from a Youngstown Beer Baron to a great football halfback.

They have pointed out his exceptional courage in playing without the protection of a mask. They have recounted his exploits. They have quoted others on his ability.

The build-up, and all of it deserved, too, has completely overshadowed other Saturday attractions here and Baker field should be taxed to its capacity of 32,000.

And all Frankie Sinkwich has to do to be assured of real consideration for All-American is to play the kind of football he is capable of playing.

Something To See

Jimmy Powers, sports editor of The Daily News, writes: "Georgia and Columbia Saturday is something to see."

"Dick Vidmer, Herald Tribune, declared: 'I don't know if it will be any consolation to Lou Little or not, but it does seem that he is worrying unnecessarily over Georgia's highly heralded back, Sinkwich. After all, if he is unfit for military duty (on account of flat feet) he hardly can

Sinkwich Set To Start Game With Columbia

McPhee Also Listed as Starter; Largest Squad in Years on Trip.

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 16.—Several hundred students and Athens citizens gave the Georgia Bulldogs a rousing sendoff this afternoon as the unbeaten Red and Black eleven departed for New York and Saturday's game with Columbia's Lions.

Thirty-eight Bulldogs were included in the traveling squad, which Coach Wallace Butts announced just before the final practice. The drill was held in light gym clothes and lasted only 45 minutes.

The Bulldog mentor said he had decided to start Frankie Sinkwich, the sensational tailback, instead of Heyward Allen, Georgia's captain who has been outstanding in drills this week.

Sinkwich to Start. After Wednesday's long drill, Coach Butts said he "probably would start Allen," but just before the train pulled out he declared, "I've decided to open the game with Sinkwich." He said he wasn't at all decided upon the starting line, but he is definite about his backfield.

"Unless I change my mind before reaching New York," he said, "we'll begin the game with Sinkwich, Dick McPhee, Cliff Kimsey and Lamar Davis in the backfield."

It will be the first starting assignment for the inexperienced McPhee.

This is the largest squad to be carried on a trip by Georgia in years.

THE SQUAD.

It includes Van Davis, George Poschner, Earl Marshall, Melvin Conger, Morris Phelps and Alf Anderson, ends; Gene Ellenson, Everett Horne, Tom Greene, Green Keltner, Wyatt Posey, Garland Williams and Clarence Nelson, tackles; Will Burt, Walter Runk, Harry Kuniansky, Winfred Goodman and Jim Lee, guards; Clyde Earhardt, Bill Grevin, Steve Hughes and Leo Costa, centers; Frank Sinkwich, Heyward Allen, Jim Todd and Henry Powers, tailbacks; Lamar Davis, Andy Dudish, Jerry Nunnally, Clarence Welch and Ryals Lee, wingbacks; Cliff Kimsey, J. C. Miller, Joe Polak and Walter Maguire, blocking backs, and Dick McPhee, Red Keuper and Mel Bray, fullbacks.

Only One Plainsman On Injured List.

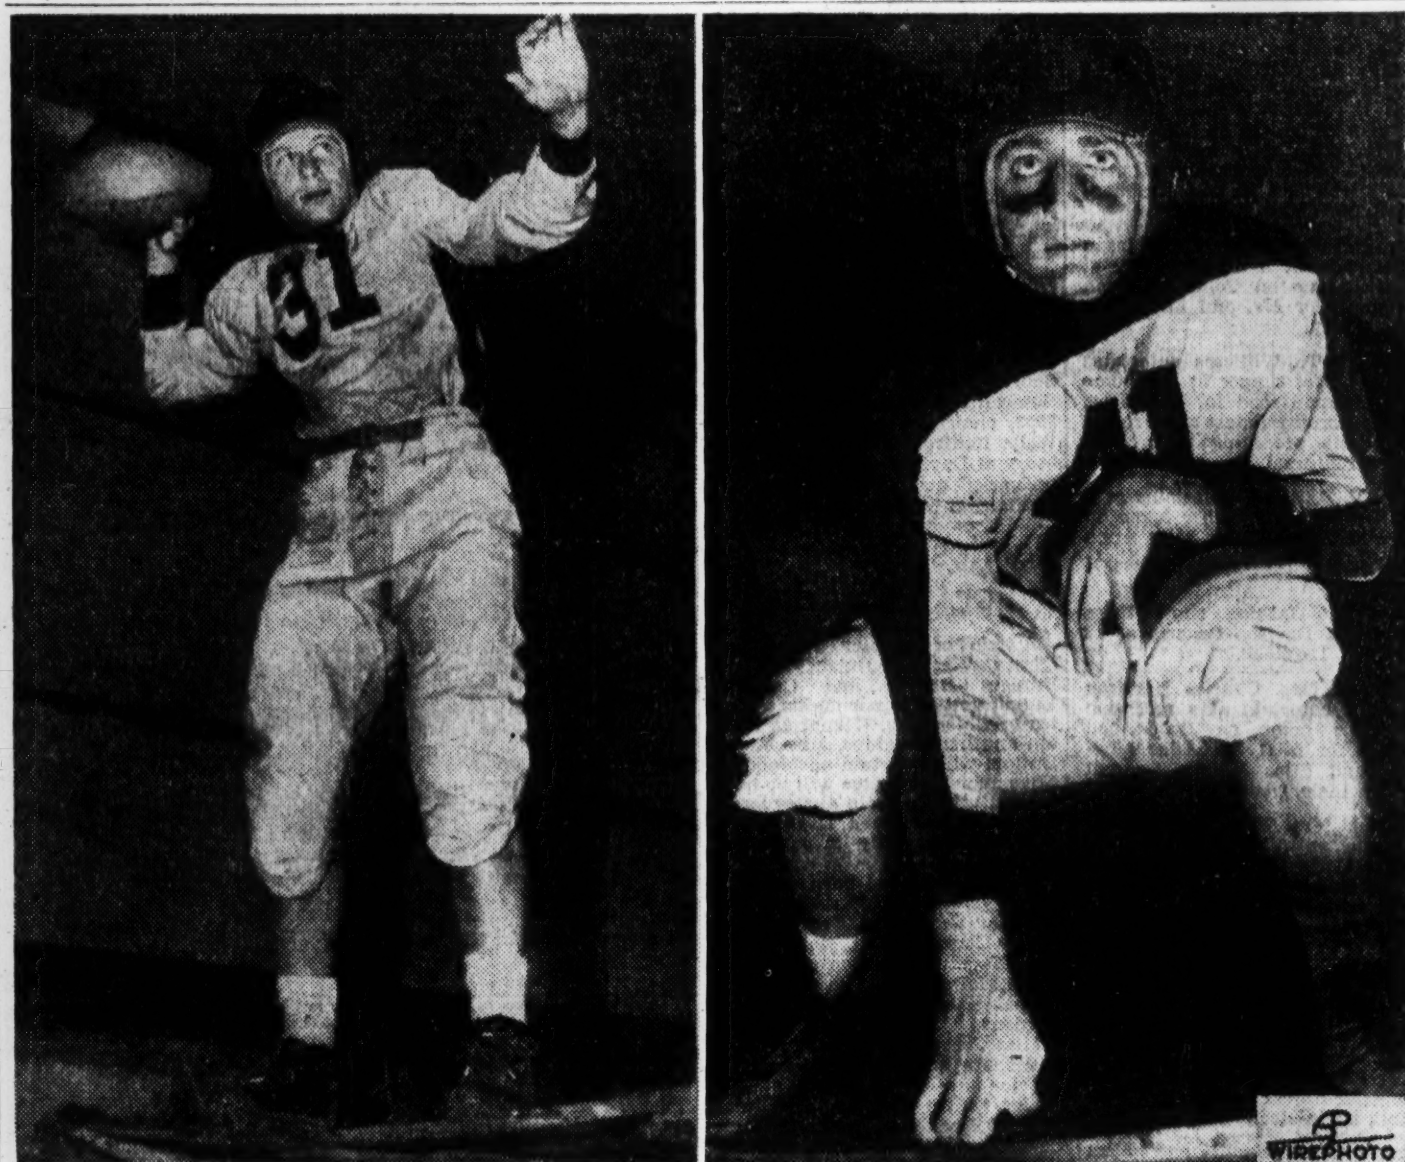

AUBURN, Ala., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Only one member of Auburn's first team was reported today doubtful of starting against Southern Methodist University in Birmingham Saturday.

Nick Ardillo, guard from Amite, La., is still out with a leg injury and trainers said it was not known whether the limb would be in shape by game time.

The first team worked out lightly today, but other members of the squad went through a lengthy scrimmage session.

HARMON ARRIVES.

BEAR MOUNTAIN, N. Y., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Tom Harmon, Michigan's all-American back last season, reached here early today to begin practice with the New York Americans pro football club for Sunday's game at New York against the Columbus Bulls. He will team with two other 1940 All-American players, John Kimbrough and Nick Drahas, in the Americans' lineup. Harmon came here from LaGuardia airport, where he arrived from Hollywood, Cal., early this morning.

LION LUMINARIES—Here are two of the reasons the Columbia Lion is roaring louder than usual this year, and making many of the New York sports writers pick the northerners to tame the Georgia Bulldogs Saturday at Baker Field. Stewart McIlvannan (left) is a passing ace, and Paul Gervernali is Lou Little's outstanding ground-gainer with an average of 10 yards per try. Columbia tripped Georgia, 19-13, last year.

Hoagland Dog Wins '41 Title On Pheasants

Rumson Farm Loch Handles 4 Finds in Great Form at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 16.—The sixteenth renewal of the national pheasant championship was concluded here today with a Georgian-owned setter, Rumson Farm Loch, named as the 1941 titleholder. A fast field of 22 pointers and eight setters contested for the crown and the triumph of the stylish setter owned by Raymond Hoagland, of Cartersville, Ga., proved popular.

Loch ran a brilliant race and handled by the veteran trainer, George Crangle, of Waynesboro, Ga., making it a complete victory for the Peach State.

The judges, Emory R. Beetham, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Donald G. Waters, of Columbus, Ohio, conservation commission for the Buckeye State, declared that the titular event was one of the best of recent years, and that Loch won his laurels outstandingly.

In the field of 30 high-class bird dogs were contenders from all parts of the country. Surracho, pointer dog, owned by W. Frank Willet, of Bradford, Pa., was perhaps closest to the winner, but no runner-up was declared.

5 Super Divers To Appear Here With Aquacade

Five super divers who have cornered the world in springboard stunts will display their high and low board talents during the four night performances of the Water Folies of 1941, colorful water pageant, which opens at the City auditorium Monday evening. A matinee is scheduled for Thursday.

Together, the quintet comprises the most brilliant array of diving ability ever assembled in one unit. Included are Joe Peterson, Panama, considered the greatest trick stunner in all times; Charlie Diehl, 235-pound wonder; Joe Seymour, featured at the San Francisco Aquacade; Jimmy Rice, of Los Angeles, holder of every known record in the Pacific coast, and Cornelia Gillissen, New York, star of the last Olympics and world's professional female diving champion.

These world-famous stars have done the one, one and a half, two and two and one-half somersaults through the air thousands of times until they are as perfect in balance, rhythm and poise as in the most elementary swim dive.

They do the corkscrew, jack-knife, forward and backward somersaults, tucks and spins in split-second precision off the two diving boards, providing not only the most graceful but the most spectacular stunts in the realm of sport.

While the diving acts provide the thrills of the show, the rest of the program is so entertaining that it captures the complete attention of the audience.

The Hopkins twins, who were featured at the San Francisco Aquacade last summer, are known as the rhythm girls of the water. They have a routine that surpasses anything yet seen. They actually dance in the water much in the same fashion as Sonja Henie would glide over the ice.

Buster Crabbe, star of Billy Rose's Aquacade at the New York's World Fair, is the feature performer.

THE COACH'S PERFECT DREAM.

My veteran guard has a jittery knee, My fullback is limping a bit, My tackles are never just where they should be In wrecking a spinner or split. Our schedule is tough and the going is rough, But I'm still well ahead of my quota, For we haven't a game with that Texas array, And we don't have to meet Minnesota.

My two ends are crippled, my halfbacks are lame, The luck that we've had isn't funny, There's still quite a chance that we won't win a game, But life is still pleasant and sunny, I still wear a smile, though our showing is vile, But for that we don't give an iota, For we don't have to tangle with Texas this fall, And we don't have to meet Minnesota.

ROSE BOWL THORNS.

Picking a team to inhale the fragrant odor of roses from the Pasadena parade, and the even more fragrant odor of important cash and football fame, has the west coast tied up in a Rose Bowl snarl. When all eight Pacific Coast conference teams were picked before the middle of October, all starting from scratch again before the first frost, you can imagine the record tangle that has come about.

It is my guess that you can gently but firmly chuck out Southern California, U. C. L. A., California and Washington State, the latter having dropped two games. This leaves Stanford, Washington, Oregon and Oregon State as the four main contenders, with the others looking for a wrecking job.

Stanford is still the favored entry—her two harder games coming up should be with Washington and Washington State.

Jimmy Phelan's Washington Huskies must get by Stanford and Oregon. These are the roughest spots in the Rose Bowl road.

Oregon State, conquerors of Stanford and Washington, but beaten by Southern California, can't afford to lose another start. And Oregon, outside of her conference roundup, has Santa Clara and Texas on the side.

The best guess anyone can make at this spot is that the head-on collision between Stanford and Washington at Seattle late this month will give you most of the answer, so far as the west coast nomination is concerned.

And it might be recalled, before the season grows any older, that the Pacific Coast Conference hasn't been any too hot against outside teams—including Minnesota, Ohio State and Santa Clara—with Santa Clara, Texas, Texas A. & M. and Notre Dame waiting to plaster additional woe on them. They are facing their worst outside showing in many years.

Three Sections.

There are three sectional games on Saturday that will help to write midwest, east and southwest rankings in big type. These are Michigan and Northwestern, Navy and Cornell, and Texas Christian and Texas A. & M.

So far these six teams have known only the sunny streets of Spotless Town. None of them has been tied or beaten. But now Michigan must offer her powerful line defense against Northwestern's brilliant backs, headed by Bill deCorrevont. Cornell must move into much harder competition against Swede Larson's fine Navy team. And two strong Texas teams must find a winner to remain in the running with Texas, Rice and Southern Methodist.

The Michigan-Northwestern party at Evanston, the home of the Wildcat, will be one of the big games of the year. Michigan, losing Harmon and Evashevski, has been a happy surprise for those who follow the Maize and Blue, who now lustily can "sing to the colors" that float in the light. But Northwestern has Bill deCorrevont ready to travel, plus several others, with just about an even chance. Cornell must move up sharply

Injured Stars Give Coaches Big Headache

Bosch, McHugh, Helms, Marshall Still on Cripple List.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY, Assistant Sports Editor.

EN ROUTE TO NASHVILLE WITH TECH FOOTBALL TEAM, Oct. 16.—There was a great deal of enthusiasm and optimism among 34 Georgia Tech football players tonight but it wasn't shared by coaches as the Jackets headed for their Southeastern conference clash with Vanderbilt Saturday.

Although Jack Helms, big sophomore tackle, doesn't seem to have much chance to play against the undefeated and united Commodores and four other men are not in the best of shape, the 34 players and even the three managers believe they have a good chance to upset the Vandy applanet.

But the coaches, Bill Alexander, Bobby Dodd and Mack Tharpe, were not so optimistic, pointing out that Johnny Bosch, Tom Anderson, Pat McHugh and Jack Marshall haven't had enough

Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whiskey

Still made the Old-Fashioned "Slow" Way!

Among Bourbon Whiskies It's OLD JORDAN

MEN who know bourbon know what it takes to achieve the delicious extra-smooth, extra-rich taste of Old Jordan Straight Bourbon Whiskey. We stick to the old methods that take more time, more care—the "slow" way we started 100 years ago. We still buy premium grains. Use more of them to a gallon. Simmer our mash slowly. That's how we get such extra-smoothness, extra richness. Yes, Old Jordan costs more to make, but not to drink! So treat yourself to the extra pleasure of Old Jordan.

Decatur Routs North Fulton Team, 21 to 0

Broyles Throws Three Touchdown Passes as Bulldogs Romp.

By HENRY DAILEY.

The Decatur Bulldogs dealt North Fulton's Bulldogs a staggering blow in the opening minute of their game on Decatur's field last night and kept the defending N. G. I. C. champs reeling for the rest of the evening as they took the important battle 21 to 0.

Little Bubber Ezell, who later proved himself the biggest gun for the Buckhead Bulldogs, was the goat of the first break. After his team had received the kickoff and tried a couple of plays, Ezell dropped back to kick, but he was rushed and got off a poor boot. Frank "Big Red" Broyles took it in and ran back to the Fulton 30. Broyles went through on the next play for 6 and Olsen crashed off tackle for a first down on the 11. Then on fourth down, with 3 to go for the score, Broyles looped a screen pass to Phil Partridge for the touchdown. Broyles then kicked the extra point.

MISSUS CHANCE.

North Fulton missed her only real chance to score late in the

Purples Maul Cadets, 64-0, for 17th Straight

Castleberry, Miller, Paschal Have Field Day as Boys' High Line Throttles G. M. A. Eleven.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

Boys' High's backfield horde perpetrated the greatest massacre since the Light Brigade charged into the Valley of Death as they slaughtered G. M. A.'s willing but outmanned Cadets, 64 to 0, last night at Ponce de Leon Park. The win was the 17th straight for the Purples.

Leading the vicious onslaught were henchmen Clint Castleberry, Don (Rod) Paschal and Buck Miller. In the ball game only slightly more than a quarter, Castleberry lead as he slashed along to three punt return for another score called back. Miller raced for two touchdowns. The fates guffawed at the unlucky Paschal, who dashed unmolested on four pay dirt excursions, only to have three of them called back for penalties on Purple blockers.

Scouting Billy Haas, quiet Bill Magbee, Shoeless Joe Kenimer, wee Bobby Chastain racked up other runs to the double stripes which gave the Doyalties 10 scores in all. Gordon Clay place-kicked three extra points from placement and old Hard Luck Paschal left-footed another for the other points.

Offensive Display. The greatest display of offensive magnificence seen in prep circles in a coon age took place as the second quarter opened. After the Purples had had the pigskin on four scrimmage plays they had dashed to five touchdowns, including Castleberry's 60-yard punt return and a 60-yard blitz by Paschal, both of which were called back and Boys' High penalized for clipping.

The Cadets never got closer to the Purple goal line than the Boys' High 36. They made only two first downs and the Hurricane's unscoring on record was as safe as Jack Dempsey on a visit to an old ladies' home. To name defensive standouts would be unfair to the others, but Bill Magbee, Phil Alexander, Buck Stainton, Charlie Furchgott and Chub Jenkins did some particularly savage work, and Joe Kenimer and Tommy Freeman did some very vicious blocking. Magbee booted one kickoff far over the G. M. A. goal. Here is the way they scored 'em:

FIRST QUARTER: 1. After Castleberry rifled Kenimer a pass good for 20 yards to put it on the G. M. A. 13, Castleberry and Kenimer put it over in four plays with Clint blasting guard for the last three yards.

2. Jimmy Gordon faded to the Cadet 40 and aerialized beautifully to Castleberry who made a sensational circus catch in the end zone, the greatest single play of the game.

HAAS ROMPS. SECOND QUARTER: Billy Haas circled end for 23 yards to the Cadet 23, but Boys' High was penalized to the 42. On the next play Paschal circled left end for the score as Duck Freeman put a terrific block on the last defender.

4. Monty (Crawford) Montgomery recovered a G. M. A. fumble at the Cadet 38, from where Paschal ran for a touchdown that was called back. On the next play Haas soloed around right end for time to sufficiently recover from injuries which kept all but Bosch on the bench against Notre Dame last Saturday.

WORK IS LIGHT. Before boarding the train, the Yellow Jackets went through another light workout on Rose Bowl field. There was no rough work as the Techs practiced blocking, passing, kicking and pass defense. The hardies of the boys were called on to do was block the dummy, which generally is about 100 per cent easier than the opposition.

In fact, the Yellow Jackets have worked lighter for this battle than for any other in the memory of the oldest railbird who haunts every workout.

There has been almost no contact work all week as the coaches slackened the pace in an effort to halt the alarming string of injuries which started before the first game.

Much time has been spent on pass defense as "it's telling no secret to say the Tech coaches fear the Commodore aerial game. The backs have been drilled every day against passes that will be thrown by Art Rebrevich, J. P. Moore and John Burns instead of the Red Devils.

The Jackets should play a better game, than they did, against the Irish and Tech coaches think they will.

But, as Bobby Dodd said a few

Arnall Will Air Game Problems

Georgia's conservation problem and some of the evils that have dragged the state near the bottom in game and fish will be aired today by Attorney General Ellis Arnall at the weekly Friendly Sportsmen's luncheon in the Kimball House.

Arnall has gone on record as favoring a complete revision of the practices that are now being carried on and a record crowd for the luncheon is expected to attend today. Eating time will be as usual, 12:30 o'clock, and all hunters and fishermen are invited, according to M. E. Harkins, president of the Atlanta Fly and Bait Casting Club.

minutes ago, "we've done all we can and there's no telling what the boys will do on Saturday."

The team will arrive in Nashville early tomorrow morning and will work out on Dudley Field, site of the battle, in the afternoon.

The traveling squad is made up of:

Ends: Harry Arthur, Paul Page, Jack Marshall, Charlie Burroughs, Haley Ector and George Webb.

Tackles: Charlie Sanders, Preston West, Tom Anderson, John Wild, Jack Helms and Sterling Eaves.

Guards: Harry Hardy, Ed Ryckley, Elmer Dyke, Jack Jordan, Wex Jordan and Bubber Quigg.

Centers: Mutt Manning, Jim Wright and Slim Sutton.

Backs: Johnny Bosch, Bobby Dodd, Davey, Eldridge, Jack Hancock, Red Oliver, Al Faulkner, Edwards, Jim Kuhn, Hal Lamb, Pat McHugh, Ralph Plaster, Wilbur Stein and Bobby Sheldon.

In addition, Managers Davis, Sanders and Woodruff and Trainer Claude Bond are along, not to mention Burton and Rico, the colored members of the team.

Injuries Bother Commodores, Too.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 16. (P)—Vanderbilt's Commodores tonight were shown pictures of the 1940 Vandy-Tech game as a reminder that the Georgia Engineers can win football games.

As the Engineers sped Tennessee-ward for the Saturday clash, Coach Red Sanders scanned his injury-beset Commodores with these disclosures:

Mac Peebles, regular guard, is definitely out of the contest with an old injury. Everette Holt, alternating wingman, will be called upon only in case of emergency.

Emil Fritz, out of practice yesterday with an upset stomach, was running at his regular guard post today and will start against Tech. Either Jimmy Webb or Sonny Baird will start at left end. Tex Robertson, the Texas youth, will replace Peebles in the starting lineup.

Sanders has told newsmen he would be satisfied with a one-point victory. He scoffed at expert prediction which rules the Commodores 13-point favorites.

Vols Stress Kicking Under Pressure

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 16. (P)—Tennessee's football Volunteers took it lightly today, tapering off their training for their first Southeastern Conference clash of the season against the Alabama Crimson Tide here Saturday.

Coach John Barnhill put his charges through brief dummy defensive and offensive practice, but then let the squad go full-speed in a kicking drill designed to test punters Johnny Butler, Bobby Cifers and Walt Slater under pressure.

Meanwhile, all signs pointed to a sell-out crowd of upwards of 30,000 for the game, in which "Bama" will be seeking to avenge three straight defeats suffered during the Vols' lull years. Despite the fact that it will be the first time in years that the two teams have met with both defeated previously, the U. T. ticket office report duels were fast disappearing and hotels hung out the "no room" signs.

Rival Coaches Played Tackle For Bulldogs

Shi, Davis Charges in Tossup Go; Russell Plays Richardson.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

It will be dog eat dog and plenty of fur will fly when two old Bulldogs growl across the field at each other tonight, but their fighting days were over long ago and they will let their youngsters do all the fighting.

Two Georgia Bulldog tackles back in 1935, Allen Shi and John (Stooge) Davis, but now head coaches at Tech High and Lanier High, respectively, will greet one another with a "Howdy, glad to see yuh, pal," and then send their charges out to crack heads at Ponce de Leon park at 8 o'clock.

Snake-Bit Twins. Davis, who succeeded Selby Buck as the Poets' head man this year, was a sophomore at Georgia in 1935 when Shi, now serving his first term as Smithie head coach, was a senior. Both played the same tackle. Shi was first string, and Davis was his replacement.

Both teams have had their ace passer on the bench with an injury practically all year, and some fine receivers just wasting away waiting for someone to chunk them a few. Marcus McWhorter, Tech High aerialist de luxe, will be there tonight, though his injured knee will still keep him below par.

If Tim Harden doesn't get well, Malcolm Bryant, Bud Cutler and Broadus Douglas will take care of the passing chores for the Poets. Bryant loomed a long one to Lafayette King on the Boys' High six last week, and the Purple supporters were afraid their unscoring record was in jeopardy until the play was called back for a clipping penalty against Lanier.

Probably the best two ends in the G. I. A. will be on the same field tonight as King, who also is proficient at running the end-around play, is definitely one of the best, and Joe Nixon, Smithie flankman, is among the elite in the conference.

MULLINS OUT. Tech High will be without the services of Bob Mullins, crack tackle. Marcus Taylor will take over the berth of Mullins, who has a severe hand injury.

Russell High should have little trouble with Richardson, the only other scrap on a local field. The game is set for Russell, Marist will engage Riverside in Gainesville; Fulton High journeys to Griffin for a joust with the high school there, and Hapeville goes to Dalton. The West Fulton-Marietta tilt has been changed over to Saturday night on the Marietta field.

The B teams of North Fulton and West Fulton are set for a struggle tonight at 7:15 on the Buckheaders' field.

Lions Stamped As Fast Team

NEW YORK, Oct. 16. (INS). It speed will do it. Columbia's Lions foresee a victory over Georgia Saturday.

They wound up their heavy work stamped by most observers as one of the fastest teams ever developed by Lou Little during his regime here. While Center Don Snively can't be of much help to the squad for the time being, due to the severe leg injury which has kept him on the shelf, reserves are sufficiently strong and fast to keep the Lions up among the toughest in the east.

Atlanta Pastor Shoots a 69!

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 16.—If Dr. Pierce Harris, well-known Methodist minister of Atlanta, ever wants to change professions, he can probably do well as a golf professional.

A visitor in the city while attending the Athens-Elberton Stewards' League sessions in near-by Winterville, Dr. Harris tried the Athens Country Club course for the first time. The course is not designed for dubs, but Dr. Harris banged around in 69—four under par—on his first round.

Simon Leases Warren Arena For Mat Shows

Warren Arena, also known as Sports Arena, scene of many stirring athletic programs in the past, has been leased outright to Abe Simon, of Memphis, well-known wrestling promoter.

Simon will stage his first heavyweight wrestling card at the Arena Wednesday night. The mat impresario hinted that he would present the biggest show he has ever offered in Atlanta as his first indoor attraction.

Abe, who will have exclusive promotional rights at the Arena, also plans to stage boxing shows in the near future, he said.

Principals for the first grappling program at the Arena will be announced Sunday.

Induction of Louis Expected Nov. 14

CHICAGO, Oct. 16. (INS)—Heavyweight Boxing Champion Joe Louis probably will be inducted into the Army between November 14 and 18 if his physical examination, already taken, shows that he is fit for military service. Colonel Louis A. Boening, Cook county selective service director, disclosed tonight.

ARTHUR MURRAY'S SUCCESS
The first Arthur Murray studio was established in the Georgian Terrace hotel in Atlanta. The same location is occupied by the present studio under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Garstin. At that time, 25 years ago, Mr. Murray was a student at Georgia Tech. While at Tech he was obsessed by a series of animated picture cut-outs in a local paper. For two or three years, beginning in 1925, Arthur Murray was the Sears-Roebuck and Montgomery-Ward of the dance. His advertisements of that period, nearly all written by himself, started a certain school of copy writing.

More and more requests for private instruction led him out of the mail order business into a studio in New York filling two buildings, 140 individual studios, and serviced by more than 200 instructors. Besides this, there are 125 branches.

Arthur Murray Studio of Atlanta is one of the leading branches.

KROGER SALES HIGH
A 21 per cent gain in sales for the tenth week ending October 14, 1941, over sales for the corresponding period last year is reported by the Kroger Grocery and Baking Company.

Sales for the period ended October 4, 1941, $24,382,058, against $20,121,714 for the corresponding period in 1940. Cumulative sales for the first 10 periods amounted to $225,802,873, a 15 per cent increase over $195,879,854 for the same 10 periods a year ago.

ATLANTA'S BUSINESS
On October 1 business conditions in Atlanta showed no change from the index for the first of September, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by the business survey department of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., New York and Detroit national advertising concern.

As of October 1, the city's business index stood at 37 per cent above normal, the same as for

Fitters Give Pointers On Adapting Lines To Flatter Larger Figures

By Ida Jean Kain.

By the time a woman can afford the kind of clothes she has always dreamed of, she is in the stylish stout class and can't wear them! That observation flitted through my mind the other day as I watched a fashion show at which all the prospective shoppers seemed to be crowding size 40s while the models were quite at ease in 32s.

The conversation that went on about me was food for this column. One grand dame, on the pouter pigeon order, beckoned with her lorgnette to a slinky young number and said: "Now, that's very smart. That makes you look very slim." Then she added, wistfully, "But I suppose you are!"

A slip of a model who came out in a black dress fitted to the hip-line in the South American manner, with tri-colors encircling the derriere, was practically doing the rumba. And three fat ladies signalled they would like to see the same dress in their size!

Some of the choice remarks from customer to model were along this line: "I'll bet you never eat a potato!" "What kind of girdle do you wear?" "Now, that's what I had in mind—I want to look just like that."

Fortunately, the fitters are modern magicians at slenderizing those who have passed the plump stage. For the figure with the large bosom, the fitter advises that the undergarment be snug but that the dress be loose across this area.

Sometimes clips are placed high on the neckline to divert attention. A similar effect can be achieved with shoulder detail.

A slight extension of the shoulder line will give the illusion of slimmest through the hips. To avoid any suggestion of the football silhouette, this may be accomplished by the use of soft pleating in the material rather than too much padding. The shoulders should be broad, but the line itself should be kept soft.

When the front line is not quite as flat as it once was, soft folds over the stomach will disguise the fault. Material over this measurement should never be drawn tight.

Hips can best be subdued with the skirt that is gored in front and has shirring in the back. A pleum of exactly the right fullness and length is also effective.

The idea in shopping—so the stylists say—is to exercise restraint in the choice of clothes. And in the fitting—so the experts say—to have the material loose across the large portion. And if you ask your dietitian, count your calories—it's less expensive all around.

YOUR DIETITIAN.

Check your measurements with the aid of the "Measure Your Curves" leaflet. If your figure is in proportion, you won't have to worry so much about your alterations. Send stamped return envelope for this material to Ida Jean Kain, The Constitution, Atlanta, Georgia.

The secret of beautiful make-up lies in its foundation. That smoothly beautiful appearance of Pennie Singleton isn't just an accident. To keep such a well-groomed appearance requires a good non-drying make-up foundation, such as the one mentioned below.

South Sea Interpreter Adds Spicy Bits To Discreet Dialogue of Film Stars

By Louella O. Parsons.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 16.—(INS.) If the Hays office doesn't step in and do something about a situation existing in the one theater in Tahiti, the reputation of our Hollywood actors and actresses will be ruined. This comes direct from John Reasin, authority on island life, who was imported by 20th Century-Fox for "Son of Fury." Reasin says there is only one film house in Tahiti and that an interpreter stands in a balcony and supposedly translates the dialogue to the natives. The interpreter, however, has decided that Hollywood dialogue is too tame and so he gives some spicy stuff of his own—boudoir talk, to be frank.

Since there are no censors in Tahiti—his idea of something spicy is really hot. "Out of the mouths of ingenuities come expressions that would do credit to a longshoreman," Reasin explains, "and the theater is jammed for all performances." Up to a few months ago they had only silent pictures—John Bunny, Douglas Fairbanks Sr. were their favorites but since the talkies came in they're crazy about everybody—thanks to the rabelaisian interpreter.

A few days ago Carole Lombard told a scribe she might not make another movie for a year—but Mrs. C. Gable had a quick change of heart after she read "To Be or Not To Be." Yes, this is the picture Jack Benny will make for Ernst Lubitsch at the Alexander Korda studios and the team of Benny and Lombard is really something new under the sun. Ernst Lubitsch says they will play the "Two Biggest Hams in Poland," which sounds very much like the one and only Lubitsch is taking his cigar out of his mouth, to put his tongue in his cheek and turn out another "Ninotchka." Carole, whose last comedy, "Mr.

Grant, She and Cary are the only two normal ones in the movie—the rest of nutty cast all have murder complexes. Two of the most interested guests at Warner Brothers' studio at the preview of "Target for Tonight" were Charles Chaplin and Hedy Lamarr, who were there—but not together. So much has been said about this movie that all of the critics were on hand to take a look at it. I must say it gives a clear picture of how a target is found by reconnaissance photographs and a raid is subsequently planned and executed by the RAF. Actual scenes were taken of every department in the air service from pilots and gunners to commanding officers and radio experts.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Mother: "Dad and I do not agree about this—you know two persons cannot always agree—I think in this case he is better able to judge than I, so you may ride your wheel on the highway."

Son: "But dad said I could ride on the highway." Mother: "And I say you can't. It's too dangerous." Son: "Which one of you am I supposed to mind?"

For their children's sake, as well as their own husband-wife relationship, parents with differing opinions should be willing to compromise.

MY DAY Noel Coward Sings On Treasury Hour

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday.—I heard today that Noel Coward is going to sing, from London, his two new songs, which I heard the other day. He will be heard over the radio on the Treasury Hour next Tuesday evening between 8 and 9 o'clock. I am delighted we are going to have this opportunity to hear him on the air.

Last night Mayor La Guardia flew down to Washington, and dinner with us and spoke before a meeting of the United Women's Organizations in the District of Columbia. This group of women's organizations is composed today of 57 women's groups, ranging from labor groups to political organizations.

They started with a meeting of twelve and stated that they would come together in a united organization to work for civilian defense. I think this is a fine achievement and hope there will be co-ordination and unity all over the country at this time in the interests of greater efficiency in community defense work.

This morning Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt arrived in time to have breakfast with me at 8 o'clock on the South Porch. Then I met my daughter and son-in-law on their arrival from Seattle, Wash. It gives a lift to my spirits just to see these two young people, even though I am so busy that I think most of our talking will be done in the middle of the night!

At 10 o'clock I was at the Office of Civilian Defense, and returned before lunch in time for two appointments at the White House. Then, three representatives of the American Women's Volunteer Association and some of our civilian defense staff came to lunch. We talked over the co-operation between the American Women's Volunteer Association workers already in the field and the civilian defense people, working through our voluntary information and placement bureaus.

I hope this will develop in every part of the country and am anxious that we should use all the work that has been done. We must keep in mind the objectives before all of us, which are to do good work to meet emergency situations and to improve the communities in which we live.

I failed to mention last week that Miss Helen Hayes, who is a native of the District of Columbia, celebrated her birthday here on October 10 while appearing in Maxwell Anderson's play, "Candle in the Wind."

It is a long time since she has celebrated her birthday here and, had I been able to be in Washington, I should have tried to celebrate with her by seeing the play. However, I shall have to postpone that until it is in New York City, because my time in Washington is almost entirely taken up, even in the evenings.

Develop a Common Hobby To Win Girl's Interest

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie: I have a problem and I need some help. I am very much in love with a girl who loves another. We go to the same church and the same school. I would like either to forget her, or to make her care for me. I have tried every way I know, but still I have not succeeded. I even stay away from church and dodge her at school because it hurts so much to see her and know I cannot have her. I have tried to go with her but she will just not go with me. I have given up trying, but I cannot forget her and she knows it. Do you think that matters?

LONESOME. I think you had better try a different method of courtship. Why not try to figure out what she enjoys in the way of outdoor sports? Find out what type boys she dates. There is such a thing as technique, you know, and it is very important. Try analyzing yourself, and perhaps you can figure out what it is that keeps her from liking you. How about your manners? Your appearance? Do you do the little nice things a girl likes? Just be persistent but not offensive in your attention, and before long you will break down her resistance. Perhaps she thinks you do not want to see her because you dodge her at school. Next time you see her, why not go up and begin talking to her? Start things off on a friendly basis and be with her as much as possible. Propinquity is important in the love game. The difference in ages makes no difference; in fact, it should add interest for the girl.

Powder Base Is a Must For Winter

By WINIFRED WARE.

In the past few cool days complexions have developed many new troubles. Chief among complaints is that scaly effect which makes it almost impossible to get powder on evenly. I know of a powder base which is most effective in combating this trouble, in giving a smooth foundation for makeup at the same time that it acts as an effective protector from the harsh effects of weather.

This base is a delightful, pale-green lotion which has the wonderfully clean odor of freshly cut cucumbers. In fact, it actually does contain the oil of fresh cucumbers, so beneficial to all skins. This is blended with other fine oils, but there's not one trace of wax to clog your pores.

The base spreads on evenly. Over it rouge and powder will go on smoothly and easily. Your skin has a moist, dewy look instead of the disturbing scaliness. Your lovely makeup clings to your complexion, now, for hours longer. This lotion seems to keep a certain amount of moisture right on the surface of your skin.

Since your skin absorbs just so much of this lotion, and no more, all you need use is three or four drops. In case you get too much you will realize it by the slight oily feeling. Just remove the excess with a tissue.

Even oily skins will like this lotion, because it soaks into the skin and does not reappear. It replaces shine with blended softness.

This lotion proves quite economical, for it goes so far. To try it you can get a 90-cent size. Later, when you find how beneficial it is, how pleasant to use, you'll want the next size, which is twice as much for $1.50.

I'll be glad to let you know where you can get this delightful lotion if you call me at Walnut 6565 or write me in care of The Constitution, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

McCormick, Reaper Firm's Chairman, Dies

Cerebral Hemorrhage Is Fatal to Famed Scion of Harvester Family.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 16. (AP)—Harold Fowler McCormick, 69, son of Cyrus Hall McCormick, inventor of the reaper, died today of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Death followed an illness that caused him to be bedridden much of the time in recent years.

At his bedside was Adah Wilson McCormick, 37, the nurse he married in 1938, and his son, Fowler McCormick, president of the International Harvester Company.

Wed Three Times.

Miss Wilson was McCormick's third wife. His first was Edith Rockefeller, daughter of John D. Rockefeller. This marriage united two of the nation's wealthiest families for 26 years, but ended in divorce in 1921. Mme. Ganna Walska, Polish singer, was McCormick's second wife, but she spent most of her time in Paris, apart from him, and they were divorced in 1931 for divorce. Six weeks after the divorce was granted she married McCormick and he gave her the Paris residence. He was her fourth husband.

Four children were born to the McCormick-Rockefeller union. Three are living. Mathilde, a Swiss riding master much older than she, Fowler married Mrs. Anna (Fitz) Sullivan when she was 52 and he 31. Muriel married Major Elisha Dyer Hubbard. McCormick served an apprenticeship in his father's International Harvester Company, became vice president in 1902 and president in 1918, but relinquished the presidency four years later and became chairman of the board of directors.

Ganna's Fourth Mate.

In the World War McCormick served as head of the Bureau of Co-ordination of Purchases for the AEF. Private funeral services will be held here. Memorial services will be conducted later in Chicago.

U. S. Jury Finds J. R. Robertson, Doctor Guilty Of Drug Selling At Age of 29

Sentence Deferred on Physician Released by Rivers.

After listening to testimony for four days and deliberating less than an hour, a federal jury yesterday found Dr. John Henry Moore, Negro physician, guilty of selling narcotics to a young white woman.

Moore, who was released from a life sentence for murder by former Governor Rivers in 1939, was convicted on two counts of selling narcotics to the young woman and acquitted on five counts of selling morphine to her brother.

Judge E. Marvin Underwood deferred until today sentence on the physician. Moore admitted delivering narcotics to the young woman on the street corner and on the campus of the Williams Street school late in the afternoon of July 24 and 25, 1940, but said he was treating her for a social disease.

Assistant United States Attorney Ellis Mundy introduced witnesses to show that through sale of the narcotics to the young woman the Negro doctor had contributed to her becoming an addict. She testified she had taken morphine "off and on" for the last 10 years but had been an addict for only about a year.

Chief Predicts Health Group Merit System

Abercrombie Expects Examinations To Be Held in January.

Establishment of a merit employment system in the State Department of Public Health soon after the first of January was forecast yesterday by Director T. F. Abercrombie.

A similar system began functioning in the Public Welfare Department earlier this month and has been in operation through the State Labor Department since 1937. The federal government required establishment of the system in the departments to whose support it contributes heavily.

January Examinations.

Dr. Abercrombie said examinations for job applicants probably would be conducted by the health department in January and that the system would begin to function as soon as the tests had been graded.

The board named three of its members to a merit council. These were Dr. C. L. Ridley, of Macon, chairman; Dr. R. L. Rogers, of Gainesville, and Dr. D. N. Thompson, of Elberton.

Dr. Abercrombie was re-elected director of the health department for a six-year term beginning next January 1. He has held the post continuously since 1917.

Big Field Guns To Be Used in Carolina Games

240-MM. Howitzers Show Accuracy at Nine Miles.

CAMDEN, S. C., Oct. 16.—(AP)—The Army's biggest field guns—off production lines just too late for World War action and in storage until the present emergency—are ready for the Carolina maneuvers.

Hurling a 345-pound projectile, the big guns—with a barrel about 20 feet long and a bore just short of 10 inches—are so accurate that gunners have demonstrated they could hit within 25 feet of an automobile parked nine miles from the gun emplacement.

The Army calls them 240 mm. howitzers. Excepting the huge weapons of the Coast Artillery—in permanent emplacements or mounted on railway cars—and the big naval guns, they are the biggest weapons in the armed forces.

Twelve of them are in the field for the two-month field exercises of the First Army, the armament of the 79th Field Artillery Regiment from Fort Bragg, N. C., the only such organization in the Army.

Lin Yutang Says Japanese Beaten With Old Tactics

(The significance of the renewed fighting in the Sino-Japanese War is discussed here by an eminent Chinese philosopher and educator, author of "The Importance of Living" and other widely read books. He was educated in American universities and has been long a teacher here.)

By DR. LIN YUTANG.
For North American Newspaper Alliance.

The latest news from the Far East has been confusing, both in the stories of Japanese abandonment of Changsha and in the interpretation of Chinese and Japanese motives for these campaigns that spread along a 1,000-mile front, from the Yangtze river towns in Kiangsi province to Chengchow, near the Yellow river, and Ichang, the westernmost point of Japanese penetration.

The Chinese have claimed the smashing of the Japanese drive on Changsha as "one of the greatest victories of the war" and the people of Chungking celebrated it with a spontaneous demonstration and the firing of 1,000,000 firecrackers.

Called 'Paper Victory.'

The Japanese military spokesman, on the other hand, scoffed at it as a "paper victory" and another spokesman at Tokyo told his own people that the reason for the Japanese retreat from Changsha was "consideration for the innocent Chinese peasants during this harvest time."

It is important first to state the facts before analyzing the value and significance of these moves. Whether the Changsha victory is a "paper victory" or not will soon be decided on the spot by a group of American correspondents invited by the Chungking government to visit the Hunan area. But the brief facts, as already known, are clear.

The Japanese sent an estimated 130,000 troops into this campaign, using the Third, Fourth and Sixth Divisions as the main attacking force, while the 13th, 33rd and 41st Divisions and the 14th, 18th and 20th Brigades formed the auxiliary force.

Cream of Troops.

Students of the Japanese Army know that the low-numbered divisions under 10 form the cream of Japanese troops. It is interesting to note that the Fifth and 10th Divisions no longer appear, having been decimated at the defeat of Tai-chung in May, 1938.

The Japanese made preparations for this campaign as far back as the middle of August. On September 18, anniversary of the Manchurian invasion, they began to pour down toward Changsha from their base in Yochow, a distance of 70 miles. On September 20 they reached the Milo river midway and steadily advanced, while the Chinese offered no real resistance, being too glad to lure them far enough away from their base to fight them at an advantage by cutting their communications. It was not till 10 days later that the enemy covered the 60 or 70 miles and reached the outskirts of Changsha.

Severe Fighting.

The severest fighting took place on September 29 and 30, when a small detachment of plain-clothes Japanese entered the northeastern corner of Changsha, only to be immediately wiped out. At 2 p. m. on September 30, the Chinese, having already recaptured points on the Hsiang and Milo rivers, started to counterattack, and on October 1 at noon the enemy, realizing they were trapped once more, collapsed and began their retreat without having secured even a foothold in the city.

To save face, on October 2 the Japanese high command announced (24 hours after the debacle of their soldiers on the field had begun) the decision to withdraw from Changsha after "having accomplished their objective of destroying Chinese forces."

To testify to the severity of the battle, two Japanese division commanders, both major generals, were killed. Major General To-yoshima killed himself at Lichiao after being fatally wounded. The body of Major General Kitano, of the Fourth Division, was found on the battlefield with important documents on him. The fact that a division commander's body was allowed to be captured by the Chinese suggests the inordinate haste of the Japanese retreat.

Chinese Victory.

Actually, the Chinese victory was based on the same tactics as the acknowledged victory of Changsha at exactly the same season of the year in 1939. The same Chinese general, Hsueh Yueh, was in command, and the Japanese advanced in three columns as they did two years ago.

The battle area comprised the same long stretch, 70 miles long by 30 to 35 miles wide and in a terrain criss-crossed by streams and rivers. The area is confined on the west by Tungting lake and the Hsiang river and on the east by the mountains of Mufushan, and provides ideal ambush bases for the Chinese army.

The gross lack of comprehension of the character of the whole war in China is evidenced by an American press dispatch from Shanghai a few days ago, quoting neutral "military attaches." These military attaches, if they exist, cannot have studied the Changsha victory of 1939 or the Tai-chung victory of April, 1938. It is their opinion that the Japanese must have "voluntarily withdrawn" because the Chinese lack the artillery and airplanes to make any counteroffensive possible.

Invalid in China War.

That may be a valid argument for the war in Europe, but not for the China war. General Pai Tsungshi himself told me that a French military expert at Chungking, on visiting the Changsha battlefield in 1939, was surprised that the Chinese had artillery but didn't use it.

General Pai replied that it was exactly because the Chinese did not bring their artillery into action that they scored the victory, since for every heavy gun the Chinese army could bring up the Japanese could bring 10. The only way to neutralize this mechanical inferiority was to cut the highways and completely immobilize such weapons. General Pai told me that a Japanese division could carry its own food only for eight days.

This simple fact explains why, for three years, Japan has not been able to make headway in the scores of campaigns in central China starting from their main base in Hankow. Every time the Chinese helped them run out of food and ammunition by cutting their communication lines and only then started to counterattack. And every time the Japanese returned to their base with 10 or 20 thousand casualties.

Chinese Counterattack.

Reports also indicate that the Chinese are counterattacking Chengchow, at the junction of the Peiping-Hankow and Lunghai railways. The Chinese announced the capture of Chang, on the Yangtze, and they are pressing in toward Hankow from Shashi, 100 miles west, and Suhsien, 100 miles northwest of Hankow.

It would be wrong to assume that this is the beginning of a major Chinese offensive. It is merely the continuance of the kind of fighting that has been going on for the last three years, since the fall of Hankow in October, 1938. Were it not for the foolish attempt of the Japanese to publicize the capture of Changsha, these battles would not have been reported at all, as most of the important battles during the last three years have rarely been reported to the outside world. The Chinese merely came in at any time and place where the Japanese defenses were weakened, like water closing in behind a tired swimmer, in an effort to keep Japan busy and wear out the invaders' morale and materiel.

People Are Pleased.

The Chinese people are a little tickled at the idea of fighting to help Britain keep Singapore and Hongkong, help the Dutch keep the Netherlands Indies and help the United States get their supplies of tin and rubber from these regions. Neither the American congress nor the English parliament has yet passed a vote of thanks to the Chinese people for doing so, and the Chinese always take a secret delight in acting with great stupidity. Furthermore, such a vote of thanks is somewhat futile. President Roosevelt has praised China and we like that. And we have already received enough tributes from American leaders for our courage, etc.

But America may be about to commit a great mistake. That deed is the appeasement of Japan. America has come down on her terms in the current secret negotiations. She cannot get Japan to break with the Axis. She cannot get Japan to abandon her foothold in Indo-China. She cannot get Japan to withdraw from central China.

"Freezing" of Plans.

Japan can only agree to a "freezing" of her further conquest plans. She cannot possibly offer effective guarantees to enable the United States to withdraw part of her fleet to the Atlantic. The only conceivable modus vivendi arrived at will be that Japan "freezes" her conquest at this point, while America "unfreezes" Japanese funds and resumes trade under a flexible license system.

Why does not America break off the negotiations until Japan, with a few more months to reflect, is willing to accept America's original terms? So long as the economic sanctions are on, America has all the advantage and therefore America can wait, while Japan steadily deteriorates. Furthermore, both the negotiations themselves and their secrecy are confusing to the public's mind here, in China and abroad and are threatening the united front of the A, B, C, D democracies, at present so well established.

LeCraw Secretary Takes Up Policing

Bill Edens, Mayor LeCraw's executive secretary, yesterday had qualified as a police officer and was considering making a bid for the Canadian Royal Mounted, which always gets its man. Booked as C. R. Sawyer, of East avenue, an alleged hit-and-run driver was held under a $750 bond on a series of charges as a result of Edens' first venture in law enforcement.

Returning home late Wednesday night, Edens drove his machine to an accident scene on Moreland avenue near North avenue, arriving just in time to hear someone remark: "There goes the driver of the other car now."

Edens caught the fleeing car. The charges: Drunk and reckless driving, speeding 60 miles an hour, leaving the scene of an accident, driving without a license and driving through a red traffic signal light.

Ideas From a Cook's Notebook

Beet Soup.

Put 3-4 cup cooked shredded beets and any available beet juice into a saucepan with 1 cup raw potato cut in small dice, 1-2 cup sliced celery or chopped celery leaves, a thick slice of onion and a tiny piece of bayleaf. Add 1 quart hot water, cover and boil gently for 25 minutes. Then rub through a coarse strainer mix the strained soup with 2 cups milk, 2 tablespoons butter and salt and pepper to season. Reheat to the boiling point, stir in 2 tablespoons flour mixed smooth with a little cold water and cook 1 minute. Serve hot with toasted croutons or crisp crackers.

Steamed Fish Souffle.

Put 1 pound firm, white fish in a saucepan and add hot water to half cover, a thin slice of onion, a sprig of parsley and 1-2 teaspoon salt. Cover and simmer for 15 minutes. Sift from the liquid, cool and then flake the fish, removing any bone and skin. Then mash the fish with a fork. Meanwhile mix 1 1-2 cups fine, soft bread crumbs with 1 1-2 cups scalded milk and 2 tablespoons butter. When the crumbs are soft, mash them smooth, add the fish, the juice of 1-2 lemons, 3 well beaten egg yolks and 1-2 teaspoon paprika. Add salt and pepper to season—about 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1-8 teaspoon pepper. Beat the whites of 3 eggs until almost stiff and fold them into the fish mixture. Pour into a greased pudding or ring mold, cover with buttered paper and steam for 35 minutes or until firm. Unmold onto a hot platter and serve with caper sauce, mock Hollandaise, egg or parsley sauce.

Cabbage and Frankfurters.
1-4 cup margarine or butter

1-4 cup flour

1 teaspoon salt
1-2 teaspoon celery salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
2 cups milk
1-2 head medium size cabbage
6 frankfurters, cut lengthwise

Melt the butter, blend in the flour, add seasoning and milk, and simmer until the sauce bubbles. Cut the cabbage into wedges and arrange in a shallow casserole which has a cover. Pour the white sauce over the cabbage and adjust cover. Have the gas oven heated to 350 degrees F. and bake the cabbage dish for 55 minutes. Remove from oven; brush the cut side of the frankfurters with melted butter or margarine, arrange them cut side up on top of the cabbage. Place under the broiler flame for about five minutes until nicely browned.

Onion and Cheese Souffle.

A unique and delicious main dish for luncheon or dinner. Peel and cut in squares 4 large white onions, cover with boiling water and cook for 25 minutes or until very tender. Drain and rub through a coarse strainer. Melt 1-4 cup butter or margarine in a saucepan, add 4 tablespoons flour and stir until smooth. Then stir in 1-2 cup milk and the onion pulp and cook, stirring constantly until thickened and boiling. Remove from the fire and add 1 cup grated cheddar cheese, 1 teaspoon paprika, 1-2 teaspoon dry mustard, 1 teaspoon salt and the well beaten yolks of 3 eggs. Mix well, fold in the well beaten whites of 3 eggs and pour into a greased baking dish. Bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes or until well puffed, firm to the touch and golden brown. Serve at once.

A Child Loves a Party

EVERYBODY loves a party; there's something gay and intriguing in the very name; something social and special. But no grownup, however artless and naive, can recapture the thrill of anticipation and excited delight that a child feels about a party. Only a glistening tree on Christmas morning is comparable to the thrill of being ushered into the dining room where upon the table is displayed among colored streamers and soft lights a birthday cake with candles. If you'll look back and remember, you'll be sure that your children have parties.

Pleased, yet a bit serious about reaching her ninth birthday, is little Miss Jean Peebles. Jean and her birthday cake are all dressed up and looking as pretty as an important event justifies. Jean lives in East Atlanta and goes to Gordon school.

Fortunately for busy grownups, a party doesn't have to be elaborate to make young eyes dance with pleasure. Several children invited to play games and to "stay to supper" is as wonderful to a child as a large party, and these small gatherings are splendid opportunities for children to learn the social graces. Special larger parties for birthdays, Christmas or Hallowe'en are, of course, much fun, but don't confine children's parties to these rare occasions.

A gingerbread boy, warm from the oven, a chocolate milkshake and a friend or two to enjoy it with him make a party for a child. Refreshments are essential for children's parties, but they can and should be kept quite simple, not too sweet and rich and served not so close to the supper hour as to interfere with the appetite for that meal. Milk or fruit drinks with a spoonful of whipped cream or a red cherry on top please a child. Simple sandwiches cut in shapes of animals or decorated with nuts or raisins to make a face are little things that give great joy to small children. Here are suggestions for party refreshments for children:

Party Cup Cakes.

2 cups cake flour.
2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder.
1/4 teaspoon salt.
1/2 cup butter or margarine.
1 cup sugar.
2 eggs.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
2-3 cup milk.

Sift flour once, measure and sift again with baking powder and salt. Cream butter or margarine until fluffy, add sugar gradually, beating well after each addition. Beat in eggs one at a time. Stir in vanilla. Add flour mixture alternately with milk, beating after each addition. Fill greased cup cake pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven, 375 degrees, about 20 minutes. Makes 1 dozen cup cakes. Frost and decorate as desired, with chopped nuts, half a maraschino cherry, a raisin, a whole nut in the center, chocolate sprinkle or mixed candy confetti.

Chocolate Frosting.

1 1/2 cups sugar
2 tablespoons cocoa
2 1/2 tablespoons boiling water
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
Sift the sugar, cocoa, and salt together, add the vanilla and moisten with the boiling water. Part evaporated milk or cream and part water may be used for a richer icing.

Jam Frosting.

2 cups confectioner's sugar
3 tablespoons red jam—raspberry, currant, etc.
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Cold water.
Sift the sugar, then sift the jam to keep back any seeds and skin. Combine the two, add the lemon juice and sufficient cold water to make the mixture stiff enough to spread.

Quick Peppermint Ice Cream.

16 marshmallows.
1 cup hot milk.
1 cup heavy cream, whipped.
1 cup crushed peppermint stick candy.
Add marshmallows to hot milk and stir until dissolved; chill thoroughly. Fold in marshmallow mixture into cream and beat until smooth and very light; fold in crushed peppermint candy. Turn into freezing tray and freeze two to four hours, stirring well twice during freezing.

Hot Chocolate.

2 ounces (squares) chocolate.
1 cup water.
3 tablespoons sugar.
Dash of salt.
2 cups milk.
Cook chocolate and water over low heat until chocolate is melted; add sugar and salt. Boil 5 minutes, stirring. Add milk gradually and heat over boiling water. Beat until frothy before serving. Children and grownups, too, will be pleased with a stick of cinnamon placed in each cup, which is topped with whipped cream.

Banana Milk Shake.

1 ripe banana.
1 cup whole milk.
Few grains of salt.
Force banana through sieve. Add other ingredients and beat well. Serve at once. This amount serves one.

Below: Hot chocolate and decorated cup cakes make easy and nutritious refreshments for a child's party.

These Steps Will Help The Food Budget

1. Inspect the contents of the refrigerator each morning before going to market in order to determine what changes need be made in the menu plans to take care of leftovers. Bits of leftover vegetables may be combined in a creamy white sauce, baked, sprinkled with cheese and called a vegetable "scallop." Or they may be combined in a cream soup. Meats and vegetables may be used in a meat pie, croquettes, etc.
2. Inspect pantry and supply shelves once a week to determine what foods need replacing. Buying staple foods in quantity results in savings; it also makes it easier to plan meals in advance.
3. To cook for two or three people divide a recipe for six in half.
4. Remember that cereals hold a high place in the rank of food bargains. Plan to make wider use of cereals and cereal products—hominy croquettes, cornmeal baked with cheese, hot cereals for breakfast, cereal muffins, pancakes, for effective economy.
5. Make a list of one-egg cakes and desserts and keep it handy for reference in planning inexpensive and wholesome desserts. Don't forget that men who work hard and children need wholesome, energizing desserts.
6. Save recipes that use the less expensive cuts of meat and learn how to make really good dishes of these cuts. The less expensive cuts are just as nutritious as the expensive steaks and chops, but they require longer and slower cooking to make them tender. This is one of the main reasons that meals should be planned in advance—to allow time to make best use of the longer-cooking, budget-saving meat cuts.
7. Select vegetables carefully, and as a rule buy medium-sized rather than very large or small ones. Cook vegetables quickly (except potatoes) in small amount of water, using the water to make a sauce for the vegetable and to add to soups.
8. Save all stale cake and bread to use in making puddings and refrigerator desserts. Combine bread with milk and eggs to make nourishing desserts. Try sauces made from leftover fruit juices over stale cake crumbs, combined with fruits or custards.

Double slices from the boned loin makes these "butterfly" pork chops.

Pork Is Popular In Cool Weather

With the coming of cool weather, sausages and pork chops play an increasingly important part in our meal planning. We southerners used to eat pork because we liked it. We still eat it for that reason, but we feel better about the whole thing now that scientific research has put its stamp of approval on pork. Pork is rich in vitamin B-1, the nerve-protecting vitamin in which American diets are likely to be deficient.

In cooking pork it should be remembered that slow, thorough cooking brings out the best flavor and makes pork quite as digestible as other less fatty meats. Pork chops should never be simply "fried;" they should be braised. By braising we mean, brown the chops in a little fat, add a little water to the pan, cover, and cook slowly until meat is well done. The butterfly pork chops pictured are double slices cut from the pork loin; they may be made also from the lean section of the ham end of the pork loin. In making them, the butcher cuts each double slice not quite through, then these slices are opened out, forming "wings." Butterfly chops are particularly nice for dainty meals, as these wings can be garnished prettily with strips of green pepper or pimiento, furthering the "butterfly" idea. They make a pretty luncheon plate served with cooked small whole red apples, and an asparagus salad.

Don't forget the many possibilities with sausage, fresh smoked, link or patties. Sausage combines well with hominy, macaroni, spoon bread, browned slices of cornmeal mush, mounds of rice or potatoes. The correct way to cook sausage is to place them in a cold skillet over a moderately slow fire. Cook slowly, turning often, without breaking the skins, until sausages are browned and done. They may be broiled in the same manner.

Bishop Presides At A. M. E. Session

EASTMAN, Ga., Oct. 16.—Bishop W. A. Fountain, presiding over the American conference of the A. M. E. church here, urged ministers and laymen today to study present-day conditions, remodel church buildings and parsonages, assist the people in the program of improving conditions in their community. He told presiding elders and pastors that they should do more to encourage young men to prepare themselves for the ministry. The young ministers entering the conference are Lindsey Thornton and R. J. Jefferson. The Rev. J. O. P. McCarter, one of the most prominent pastors of the conference, upon his own request was superannuated. The following ministers died during the year: Dr. J. H. Bryan, for many years a presiding elder and treasurer of the conference; the Rev. J. H. Hinton, Z. T. Lucas and the wife of Rev. J. W. McKnight.

Largest Fresco in Hemisphere Being Painted at Puerto Rico

By DAVID A. SAFER.

For North American Newspaper Alliance. SAN JUAN, P. R., Oct. 16.—A giant fresco of "The Last Supper" in brilliant color and painted with consummate patience and feeling, has as if by magic, appeared on the glistening white wall of the sanctuary of the Sagrado Corazon, the Church of the Sacred Heart, Santurce.

Flowing from the many-faceted imagination and facile brush of Jose Vela Zanetti, a Spanish refugee artist, this interpretation of the historic scene spreads 36 feet across and 18 feet deep—and will be the largest fresco in the Western Hemisphere.

Deeply interested in the evolution of Christian art, to the same extent that there has been an evolution in architecture and music, Vela Zanetti has painted the 12 Apostles as poor peasants—representing the Spanish people. He has divested the picture of the ostentation and pomp apparent in the famous Leonardo and even more so in the sumptuously decorated work of Ghirlandajo.

Rebellion Shown. Leonardo, a great believer in geometric composition, had grouped the Apostles in four distinct sets of three each. Vela Zanetti has rebelled from this classical type of composition. Each Apostle is a distinct individual, a picture in himself. Thus he has expressed his feeling and desire for independent thought and action.

His faces have the long, strongly accented lines and deep light and shade contrasts of El Greco, yet they reflect individual personalities—Judas, the traitor, cringes and covers at the extreme right, wrapped in dark, flowing robes that accentuate his perfidy. Mural painter, master of fresco, sketching and work in water colors and oils, Vela Zanetti's life is the story of "True Artist."

Having studied in Spain under the famous critic of El Greco, Cosio, and then in Paris and Italy, he learned his art and his life work from its very roots. In Florence, Rome and Siena he studied at the wellspring of fresco and mural art—covered minutely the color, composition and brush techniques of Leonardo, Rafael, Michelangelo, and the masters of color—Titian and Tintoretto.

Believes in Freedom. Believing firmly that the artist cannot live in an atmosphere which stifles his intellectual and emotional processes, Vela Zanetti returned to Spain when he saw his treasured ideals of freedom and independence threatened by Franco's revolutionaries and their German and Italian Fascist allies. Known throughout Spain as a famous painter and lover of the art of his country, he was commissioned by the Board of Education to head a motorized column which was to proceed to Madrid and to the world-famous El Prado Museum—remove its store of art—and escort it safely to Valencia. He took this job after having fought in the grim, bloody warfare at Guadalajara—where Mussolini's crack troops were scattered to the winds by untrained patriots, German and Italian raids.

were at their height when he reached Madrid with his men, but the loading of paintings and manuscripts, gems and books, was completed without mishap.

As head of the motorcade, he was responsible for Spain's priceless collection of Velazquez, Goya and El Greco paintings—at the mercy of German and Italian bombing planes, but he got through safely and later on, the works were displayed at the League of Nations gallery in Geneva.

When the Barcelona government surrendered, he moved across the border and was interned in France with thousands of his brothers in arms. A voluntary exile from a land in which he saw no promise of freedom of conscience and thought, he left his home—and a month later was granted passage across the Atlantic by the International League of Artists.

He had no passport and so was able to land only in Santo Domingo, in the refugee colony established at Sosua on land given by Rafael Leonidas Trujillo. He could not take his wife with him, and Sabcha, a Polish Jewess whom he had met in Barcelona, came several months later. A month after she landed in the Dominican Republic, she gave birth to twin girls—who were aptly named Carmen and Consuelo del Mar.

Vela Zanetti came to Puerto Rico on a visitor's permit last year for four months and gave four lectures and five exhibitions. All of his work was sold, including several copies of El Greco on wood. He has only been here a few months and plans to return to the Dominican Republic soon for his wife and family.

One Boy Slain, Two Shot In Reform School Break

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 16.—(P)—One boy was killed and two wounded today in an attempted break at Pennsylvania's new industrial school at White Hill. Paul Selfridge, 20, died in the institution hospital shortly after he and three other inmates had mounted the school's barbed-wire enclosure under gunfire. Those wounded were George Clark, 20, shot in the hip, and Clayton Bird, 20, hit in the leg. The fourth boy surrendered. The boys had ignored warning shouts of guards who saw them scaling the fence, the school superintendent said.

German Military Orders for Soldiers To Loot and Plunder To Stay Alive Is Disclosed by Soviet Command

By PETER PAVLENKO
For North American Newspaper Alliance.
MOSCOW, Oct. 16.—(By Wireless)—Study of decrees issued by the German high command, which were seized by the Russian forces at Lake Ilnen at the time of the destruction of the 30th Infantry

Division, is highly instructive.
As far back as the end of June, order No. 128-41, for the rear contingents of the 30th Division reads as follows:
"Regardless of the fact that the utmost effort is being made and all means of transport is being used at present, the Army can obtain supplies only for the most important districts. Units on their part must be compelled to use all means and possibilities, thus helping to relieve the transport load."

An order issued by the 56th
Motor Corps command said:

"Those who economize transported supplies on behalf of trophy products are helping their country."
This order to plunder was even more eloquently given in a decree from the commander of the 126th Division:

"The first commandment of each military unit must be to live at the expense of the occupied country."
The command of the 16th German army in order No. 45, dated August 9, informs the troops:
"In view of the fact that the situation in clothes and especially shoes, is now extremely difficult, it is indispensable before burying bodies to remove shoes from corpses."

Five days earlier the 30th Division command said:
"It is now permissible to wear irregular uniforms, use shorter towels and thinner blankets."

"In view of the conditions in which the German army finds itself in a country with an insignificant quantity of cattle, and taking into consideration that it is necessary to economize on valuable canned goods, of which there is a very limited quantity, there should be no refusals of spoiled meat."

Strong Leadership Urged by George

VALDOSTA, Ga., Oct. 16.—(AP) "Give us stronger backs to bear our burdens, not light burdens," Senator Walter F. George, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, appealed today in an informal talk before the Georgia Peace Officers' Association.

"We must go forward with the leaders we now have, and we must give them all the co-operation we can muster," The senator, on whose shoulders fell a large share of the tax program to finance the national defense effort, told the convention that democracy in government is vital to American principles.

He discussed the nation's growing armaments structure and declared "a solid bulwark is being built for the preservation of this country's liberties."

In Cromwellian times, battle pikes sometimes were 18 feet long.

Chamblee Gets Reduction in Phone Rates

Move Brought About by Protest of Lions Club, Citizens.

Protest of the Lions Club of Chamblee and other telephone subscribers in that town resulted yesterday in the Georgia Public Service Commission ordering a reduction in rates ranging from 25.3 per cent to 36.9 per cent.

At the same time, the commission ruled that the density of subscribers there did not warrant the extension of the Atlanta base rate to that area. It announced that its engineers had investigated the service in Chamblee and that the telephone company was taking all steps to insure efficient and reliable service in the future.

When improvements have been completed, the commission will make another test of the service there. The rate for a one-party residence phone was reduced from $22.50 to $14.25. Two-party residence phones were reduced from $12.41 to $8.25. The business rate was lowered from $26.50 to $18.25 and two-party business phones were reduced from $16.41 to $12.25.

These rates entitle subscribers in the Chamblee area to unlimited Atlanta exchange service and are effective on the November billings.

'Don't Let Raven Die,' Plead Comic Readers, But Too Late

There comes a time, even to comic strip artists, when loved ones are parted by death.

And as in real life, the death of "Raven Sherman," one of the pretty characters in Milton Caniff's strip, "Terry and the Pirates," running on The Constitution's comic page, has cast a pall of gloom among Caniff's wide circle of followers in Atlanta.

"Raven," the victim of injuries while in the hands of "Judas," the villainous character in the strip, died for the lack of medical attention after being ruthlessly thrown from "Judas'" truck in a deserted part of the country. "Dude" and "Terry," who madly pursued the fleeing truck and risked their lives by wrecking their car to avoid hitting "Raven" after she was tossed from the truck, did all within their power to save her, but they were helpless, and when the end came they buried her as best they could.

As the end neared, The Constitution's telephone was kept busy as readers of the strip anxiously inquired about her health. Last night two telegrams were received at The Constitution for the creator of pretty "Raven." They were both pleas, but they were to no avail, for "Raven" is now resting in a crudely made grave, made by the loving hands of "Dude" and "Terry."

"Knowing that it is in your power," a telegram from the La Run Beauty Shop said "please find it possible to let Raven Sherman live, for it's in your power," another telegram from Andrew J. Stoval said.

But there comes a time. . .

Youth Pleads Fake Federal Girl's Defense Officer Pleads In Shooting Guilty in Macon

Held in Maine, Boy Allegedly Admits Killing in Maryland.

PORTLAND, Maine, Oct. 16.—(AP) Contending that he fired in defense of a 16-year-old girl, Herbert H. Cox Jr., 16, a Virginia schoolboy, was held here tonight as a "fugitive from justice" after allegedly confessing that he had shot and killed a middle-aged man early Monday morning while parked on a Maryland roadside. Deep in a Maryland thicket a bullet-torn body was found today, identified as that of Grainger G. Browning, 40, of Mt. Olive, N. C., who had driven his automobile and trailer to Alexandria, Va., as a defense project worker.

In a telephone conversation with Baltimore police, the slender, tousle-haired Cox said he shot a man he knew only as "Browning" when the latter made compromising advances toward Ida May Price, 15, in the front seat of Browning's car. With Cox in the back seat was Leona Ellen Cunningham, 14.

To Issue Warrants. At Darlington, Md., State Police Sergeant John J. Cassidy said tonight that warrants would be sworn out tomorrow morning charging Cox and the two girls with the slaying.

Police Inspector Edward M. Kochian said Miss Price told him Browning "tried to get fresh with me" and that he told her "I didn't take you for a ride for nothing." Kochian also quoted Cox as saying "I didn't like the idea of an old man monkeying around with a 15-year-old girl." "I pointed the gun at him and shot him," Cox was quoted. "I was excited and was afraid he would do something."

Pockets Rifled. Before the shooting, Cox told police, he pleadedly asked Browning "Why don't you leave Ida May alone?" Browning did not reply, he said. After that, he continued, "I'm not sure what I did."

Maryland authorities reported that the pockets of Browning's clothing had been turned inside out, that his shirt and trousers were torn and that his face was blood-smeared. Cox told Police Chief Edward R. Rodwell that they took Browning's wallet containing $10 and his watch. When taken into custody here the trio was penniless and had wired their parents in Alexandria for funds.

Aluminum Operations at Plant in Chicago
Are Banned.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16. (AP)—The Office of Production Management clamped a six months' ban today on aluminum operations of a Chicago firm accused of diverting defense aluminum supplies into non-defense production.

Donald M. Nelson, priorities director, issued an order suspending all aluminum work of the Central Pattern & Foundry Company until March 31, 1942, except for completion of defense orders on its books as of October 1.

Nelson said the firm's aluminum business averaged about $1,500,000 a year.

The order, first such action undertaken by OPM, charged the firm with shipping 41,449 pounds of aluminum in July to six separate companies. The shipments were said to have included material for juke boxes, slot ma-

In addition to aluminum operations, which OPM estimated were about 60 per cent of the company's business, Central Pattern also fabricates brass and zinc products.

Nelson declared that "this company is one of the first to be struck. Don't think it is an isolated case because it is just the beginning."

The priorities director said OPM investigators were making inquiries into about 1,800 aluminum companies, activities to detect possible priorities regulation violators. The suspension order, which has the force of law, said the OPM's investigation of Central Pattern showed the firm misrepresented its scheduled aluminum shipments in July, failed to obtain required statements as to inventories and orders from its customers, and, without authorization, accepted deliveries of aluminum scrap.

Union Orders
Aircraft Plant Strike Delayed

Two Steel Factories Tied Up as Fresh Disputes Flare.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
An upsurge of fresh labor disputes tied up two steel plants and an automobile tire rim factory yesterday, all busy on defense work.

At the same time, the AFL machinist executive board instructed its membership not to strike against the Consolidated Aircraft Corp., pending probable adjustment of a wage dispute by government officials in Washington.

W. J. Chudleigh, union president, said machinist officials were "expecting trouble," possibly isolated, unauthorized walkouts, but that every effort would be made to keep the men at work and continue the production of bombers.

Employing 28,000 workers, Consolidated has $750,000,000 in aircraft orders.

About 8,000 workers were affected by the fourth walkout in four months at the Great Lakes Steel Corporation, Detroit. The strike apparently was a rank-and-file action which developed after CIO officials made a report to a union meeting Wednesday night on the progress of wage adjustment negotiations. Officials of the firm called it a "wildcat" strike.

A breakdown of contract negotiations led to a strike at the Lakeside Steel Improvement Company, Cleveland. The company president said the United Auto Workers Union (CIO) wanted the concern to dismiss any man who failed to pay his dues.

The plant employs only 110, but its defense importance was described by federal officials as far out of proportion to its size. Among other work, it hardens and tempers gun mounts, aircraft parts, tank axles and discs. CIO-United Rubber Workers walked out at the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company's No. 3 plant in Akron protesting that the management had refused to pay them for an hour and a half when machines were idle due to no fault of the workers. The plant employs 300.

Five-Hour Stoppage.

During the day, there was also a five-hour work stoppage by some men at the Ford Motor Company's River Rouge plant. About 400 blast furnace workers walked out at 8 a. m. and an hour later 600 coke oven workers quit. Work was resumed at the request of leaders of the CIO-United Automobile Workers who said no strike had been authorized. Ford officials said the strikers asked wage increases, but gave no details.

At Pascagoula, Miss., striking AFL workers voted to go back to their jobs at the Ingalls Shipbuilding yards as recommended by their leaders. The Defense Mediation Board took over the case Wednesday.

The Defense Mediation Board set a hearing for October 27 on the strike by CIO-United Automobile Workers at the Hillsdale (Mich.) Steel Products Company. This dispute had tied up work by the Spicer Manufacturing Corporation, Toledo, which makes tank transmissions from parts produced by Hillsdale.

Secretary Dave Basor, of the Welders and Burners' Council, said yesterday 1,300 Seattle welders would withdraw from their American Federation of Labor unions and form an independent international association of welders. He said the decision came after 60 welders at the Todd-Seattle dry-docks found it impossible to work yesterday because of jurisdictional disputes. Todd officials, however, asserted they had no knowledge of any dispute.

Pittsburgh's 15-day hotel strike, involving eight of that city's leading hostellers, ended yesterday when 2,400 hotel service workers and bartenders accepted pay raises totaling $215,000 yearly. It was estimated the strike caused $1,000,000 loss of business.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Oct. 16. (AP)—Forty members of the Alabama-West Florida Turpentine Producers' Association heard Ed Oliver, association advertising manager, outline the benefits of promotion for turpentine.

Love Will Come Again

The Police Take Cherry for Questioning; Brett Hobart Slips Away From the Party

By Alma Sioux Scarberry.

SYNOPSIS. April and Kent Hillier come to a party of the week after six years of married life. They are very much in love but Kent, or Hill as he is known to April and his friends, refuses to settle down and go to work. When most of his life is all right for April to hold her steady, she is giving voice to her feelings in the Hillier-Lorraine School of Music and Dance which she has formed with her life-long friend and companion, Gay Lorraine. En route home from Reno by plane, April meets Curt De Witt, millionaire steel magnate. He steps from the plane with her to find Hill waiting for her at the airport. He has been drinking and is a bit of a mess. April, after a brief exchange with April Hill, leaves in a huff. Hill becomes engaged to a wealthy and notorious divorcee, Drusilla Bayne. During April's absence in Reno, Cherry, her 18-year-old sister, has left college, broken her engagement with Pat Hastings, a young lawyer, and come to live with April. Cherry is very much upset by April's divorce and is determined to be a model and "gold digger." She finds employment as a model and starts going around with a very fast crowd. Pat comes to visit Cherry and attempts to dissuade her. April also talks to her but is unable to shake the young girl's stubborn determination. Gay arranges a radio audition for April and it is successful. She gets a sponsor immediately and begins April Lind on the radio. Curt attends the premiere and proposes to April on the way home. She permits him to kiss her but declines his proposal. She meets Hill on Fifth avenue and accepts his invitation for a cocktail together. She chides Hill for his neglect of her since his divorce and she gets angry. In his anger he tells her that Curt owns the company which is sponsoring her radio program, Gay confirms Curt's ownership of the company and admits that he had suggested the audition for April. Cherry goes to a penthouse party with socially prominent Brett Hobart, who has been escorting her around town.

INSTALLMENT XVIII. Several girls screamed. Brett Hobart was at the elbow. Si said under his breath: "You'd better go in to the master bedroom and see your girl friend. Two girls have been fighting on the terrace railing. She must have witnessed it. Lola Hitchcock found her in a faint in the terrace door." Brett said wildly: "Oh, hell! I've got to get out of here, Si. If I get mixed up in this thing my old man will take away every cent I've got. I've been in enough trouble as it is." Si gave him a withering look. "You're going to run out and leave the kid in a spot like this? What kind of a heel are you? Aren't you engaged to her?" "I am not," Brett denied, downing his own drink. "She's a swell fellow to play around with, but

Baering Down on the News

By Arthur "Bugs" Boer.

I went to Baltimore Monday to talk to the mail order advertisers and I never saw such a crowd at the depot. Well, I don't blush easier than green cucumbers, but I thought Baltimore had a really recognized me as a mad genius. But Dorsey Warfield, who publishes the Baltimore News, says the reception is for Eddie and that's all. You know what my old man thinks of models!" "I know what I'd think of you if I were your old man," Si Win-ters turned on his heel and walked away. By that time several other members of the police and detective forces had arrived, but a butler showed Brett Hobart a secret way out when he gave him $50. Cherry opened her eyes to find a policeman bending over her. She looked up at him dazedly: "Where am I?" she asked weakly. "You fainted," said the officer. "Take it easy till you get your wits about you. You're all right." Lola stood on the other side of the bed crying frantically into the wrist of a handkerchief. The maid was wringing cold towels and laying them on Cherry's head. Suddenly Cherry, with a stifled scream, tried to raise up. "That girl!" she said wildly. "She tried to jump off the terrace. I remember now. Oh, God! I—I had to hit her over the head. She—she's out there now. Do—something!" "She's on her way to the hospital," said Brannan. What were you trying to do, murder her? What were you two dames fighting about?" Cherry moaned and fell back, almost losing consciousness again. Lola cried: "She never saw Patsy Lloyd in her life before. She couldn't have been fighting with a girl she didn't even know. You can't do anything to her!" Cherry said weakly: "I opened the door and saw her trying to jump. I—tried to keep her from it." "Well, we'll find out more about that at headquarters," Brannan did not look convinced. "Pull yourself together. You'll have to come along with me." "You can't take her," Lola sobbed. "I won't let you! She hasn't done anything." "You're going too," said the officer. "So is your host and a few other guests. I'll be quite a party I'm thinking before it's settled." Dazedly Cherry got up a little later, her legs shaking until she could scarcely take a step. "May I call my sister?" she asked the policeman. "I—I want to let her know." "You can have her called from headquarters. Officer Brannan took her arm. "When you know where you're going to be, and what charge you're going to be held on, if any, The desk sergeant takes care of that." The next two hours were a nightmare of photographers and reporters and detectives. Lola, snapping frequently at a particularly persistent member of the press, or a detective who seemed to doubt that Cherry was telling the truth. Si seemed completely broken up over what had happened. In an interview he told reporters that Patsy Lloyd was "the finest kid I've ever known." She was different, he said from most of the others, and he would marry her in a minute if it weren't for the difference in their ages. He hadn't wanted to ruin her life. She didn't belong in a crowd like this. Patsy was different. No he wasn't engaged to Fifi Du Bois. It was only a publicity stunt to help her get a start in this country. Si would have said anything to clear the name of the little girl who had tried to end her life for love of him. Worse than almost anything happening to Cherry was the knowledge that Brett Hobart had run away and left her alone to face the police. She had been so sure they would be married. So certain that he wouldn't be able to live without her. Cherry had always been entirely conceited where men were concerned. Hadn't she been told all her life how beautiful she was, and that no man could resist her? Beating through her tired brain as question after question was fired at her was the humiliation of Brett's desertion. If she'd been a debutante he wouldn't have dared do such a thing! She was just a model because he got publicity for being seen with a girl from Georgetown. What a fool she had been! A reporter had told her Brett Hobart denied even being at the party with her, asserting he had merely met her at the bar. They were only casual friends! When the newspaper men tried to get her to say she would sue for breach of promise, she could have screamed with humiliation. What a cheap person they must think her! Curt De Witt was riding home from the annual dinner of his college fraternity when he turned on the radio in his car and caught the news of Patsy Lloyd's attempted suicide. A voice was saying tonelessly: "Miss Cherry Lind, 19-year-old model, is being held by police for questioning. Miss Lind is the sister of April Lind, singer and radio star. Miss Lind hysterically denies that she tried to push Miss Lloyd from the terrace during a quarrel." Curt called to his chauffeur: "Stop at the next drug store where I can telephone, Mike." Damrosch Back On Music Hour; Premiere Today

Composer Presents Appreciation Show on WSB, WAGA.

The NBC Music Appreciation Hour, conducted by Dr. Walter Damrosch, will return to the air for its 14th uninterrupted season today.

The programs, which have won wide following among adults, as well as millions of school children from coast to coast, will be broadcast over the NBC-Blue and Red networks from 2 to 3 o'clock over WSB and from 2 to 2:30 over WAGA.

This year, for the first time, the Series A and B concerts will be broadcast on alternate weeks at 2 o'clock, thus enabling elementary classes to listen to two courses in a single season. Similarly, the Series C and Series D concerts, for junior and senior high school students, will be broadcast at 2:30 o'clock, E. S. T., on alternate weeks.

Dr. Damrosch will conform to his usual policy of illustrating the various lessons with entirely different last season, including interesting new compositions, as well as familiar favorites.

The famous conductor, and composer, now in his 80th year, will open the first program of the season, appropriately, with the march from "Tannhauser" from Wagner, the composer whom Dr. Damrosch did more to popularize in this country than any other living conductor.

Other compositions to be played in the Series A section of the program will be Lacombe's "Springtime Serenade," minuet, from "The Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz, march from "Aida," by Verdi, and "Procession of the Sardar," from "Caucasian Sketches," by Ippolitov-Ivanov.

For the Series C half of the program Dr. Damrosch has chosen part of the third movement from Mahler's Symphony No. 1 in D Major, Fantasia from Bizet's "L'Arlesienne Suite No. 2," the finale from Franck Sonata, for violin and piano, "Roman Carnival," overture by Berlioz, "Prelude," by Javernet, and "Slavonic Dance No. 7," by Dvorak.

Sylvia Sidney, Massey Star In Bronte Play

'Wuthering Heights' Is Chosen by Martin for Tonight.

Sylvia Sidney and Raymond Massey have the leads in Charles Martin's radio adaptation of Emily Bronte's novel, "Wuthering Heights," on "The Playhouse" tonight at 9 o'clock over WGST.

The action of "Wuthering Heights" takes place in a gloomy mansion on the English moors. It concerns the love of a sly, stable boy for the daughter of the house, their separation and subsequent marriages, each to persons not of their choice, and their final grim reunion.

Canadian-born Raymond Massey, actor, producer and a familiar figure on the international stage, began his acting career in 1922. Highlighting his stage activity in the last decade have been "Abe Lincoln," "The Shining Hour." As a producer, he is responsible for such plays as "Grand Hotel" and "An American Tragedy." Movies in which Massey has appeared include "Fire Over England," "Prisoner of Zenda" and "The Hurricane."

Grable Plays Lead In Radio Mystery

It's a three-way starring team on Columbia network's "Hollywood Premiere" tonight, when Betty Grable, Victor Mature and Laird Cregar appear in a radio adaptation of their latest movie, "Hot Spot," WGST handles at 9 o'clock.

"Hot Spot" is a murder story of unique situations in which, by means of a flash-back, the life of the murdered wife is reconstructed to show the steps in the crime.

Betty Grable plays the murdered girl's sister, with Victor Mature as the man suspected of the murder.

William L. Shirer did a great deal of travel in Europe during his years as a reporter and CBS correspondent, but it was nothing compared to the schedule he has in America. Last week he did his Sunday night broadcast in New York; boarded a plane for Hollywood, where he acted as technical advisor on a movie for two days; flew back to Boston for a lecture; trained back to New York for a talk in Town Hall and during his spare time worked on a magazine article.

AUNT HET
By ROBERT QUILLLEN.

Jim uses his little money to support his old mother; but if the government won't let him call it a benevolence, I don't believe Heaven will, either."
